

Nixon increasingly under fire from Republicans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another conservative Republican senator has attacked President Nixon's handling of the Watergate affair while two others said most of their anti-Nixon mail is inspired by the President's enemies.

Sen. Peter H. Dominick, R-Colo., advised Republicans to declare political independence of the Nixon White House and said the party must cooperate in beginning impeachment proceedings to establish the President's innocence or guilt.

Dominick and Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott called on Nixon to make a complete disclosure of all tapes and documents relating to the Watergate investigations.

Scott and Vice President-designate Gerald R. Ford said Monday night there are no valid reasons for Nixon to resign, or for impeachment proceedings against the President.

Ford, the House Republican leader, told a testimonial dinner for Scott in Philadelphia that there is "no real sound ground" for the resignation of the President.

And Scott, the Senate GOP leader, said, "The President has not defied any law or any court. He has not committed any impeachable offense. Yet he is being tried without a trial and he is being convicted without evidence."

Last week, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said public confidence in Nixon is so low that his only hope of escape is to appear voluntarily before the Senate Watergate committee and testify under oath.

However, speaking Monday in Logan, Utah, Goldwater said that Nixon should not resign. "Nothing that has gone on so far makes me think that he should," Goldwater said.

Goldwater said also that he opposes impeachment. "If, however, they can prove that he was dishonest, he should be impeached."

The committee is set to vote on a proposal by Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., who suggested the panel tell the President it is willing to meet him privately at the White House, question him without placing him under oath, and make the transcript of the session public.

Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., has suggested Nixon resign but Scott rejected that idea.

"I don't think the President should resign," he said. "This has never been discussed in any leadership meeting or conference ... I regret the statement by Sen. Brooke."

On the NBC-TV "Today" program, Thurmond said Nixon had lost confidence "because of the campaign of the radical wing of the news media, bending the true facts. Those who lost the election are still against him. Although they lost the election they still want to run the country."

The mail of most members of Congress has been running heavily against the President. Two senators said they believe it is politically inspired.

Sens. William L. Scott, R-Va., and Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said they believe most of their anti-Nixon mail is coming from supporters of Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., or is inspired by such groups as the AFL-CIO, Common Cause and the American Civil Liberties Union. All three groups have called for Nixon's resignation or impeachment.

The Virginia Republican said a spot check with the writers of 1,000 anti-Nixon communications received by his office showed 77 per cent had voted for McGovern in the 1972 presidential election.

Another conservative, Sen. James L. Buckley, Con.-R.Y., said however that he believes most of his mail on the subject was a genuine and spontaneous outburst caused by the firing of special prosecutor Archibald Cox and the resignation of Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson.

Meanwhile, a call for "absolute and total disclosure" by the White House and the President came from ousted Deputy Atty. Gen. William D. Ruckelshaus.

And Republican Gov. Thomas Meskill of Connecticut said the President owed the public a better explanation of why he

Resignation idea 'foolish'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Referring to "this Watergate foolishness," White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler says President Nixon won't resign "no matter how great the criticism."

Using the strongest no-resignation language yet offered by the White House, Ziegler volunteered to newsmen flying back with Nixon from Florida Monday night:

"The President is not a quitter and he never has been."

In the President's view, Ziegler said, a resignation now would run counter to the entire constitutional system and do violence to what Nixon regards as his continuing mandate from those who gave him a landslide re-election victory a year ago.

Ziegler said Nixon is currently devoting most of his time and attention to the search for a Middle East peace and to mounting energy problems — "not to this Watergate foolishness."

Asked if he meant to use that term to characterize the continuing Watergate investigations and related developments, Ziegler said, "I call it foolishness and tragedy."

The White House spokesman acknowledged that Nixon, during a four day stay in Florida, did devote part of his time to Watergate-related matters and will be acting to dispel what Ziegler described as "a time of great suspicion and turmoil."

Asked what Nixon will do, he replied, "he's going to do an awful lot."

Declining to elaborate, Ziegler said Nixon's course will unfold over the weeks and months ahead.

"He's not a man who steps aside and walks away from adversity. He's never done that in his entire political career and he's not going to do it now," said Ziegler.

Among those who made the flight back to Washington with Nixon was Stephen Bull, his appointments secretary, who was to resume testimony today in U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica's hearing on the circumstances surrounding the nonexistence of tapes for two presidential conversations that have interested Watergate prosecutors.

Two of Nixon's principal Watergate lawyers, J. Fred Buzhardt and Leonard Garment, flew to Florida Saturday night and returned to Washington Monday in advance of Nixon.

Nixon scheduled a 3 p.m. Cabinet meeting today to discuss energy problems aggravated by a cutoff of Arab oil shipments to this country.

The President will unveil new energy conservation measures, probably Wednesday.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The first firemen's strike in the 108-year history of the New York City Fire Department ended today, five hours after it started. Fire Chief John T. O'Hagan said the city was "in a condition of imminent peril" during the walkout.

"I'm immediately calling off the action of the firemen," said Richard J. Vizzini, president of the 10,900-member Uniformed Firefighters Association, after a conference in State Supreme Court.

New York's firemen walked off the job today in a potentially grim strike, the first since the city's fire department was organized 108 years ago.

The action was in defiance of a court order under which each fireman could be cited for contempt. Pickets went up at some fire stations, but officials said they did not know immediately if all of the city's 11,000 firemen decided to strike.

President Richard Vizzini of the Uniformed Firefighters Assn. announced the strike action as union negotiators blamed Mayor John V. Lindsay for an impasse in contract talks.

Milwaukee fire fighters — numbering about 1,000 in a city of 700,000 — were ordered to cease a work slowdown today after National Guard units were called up to help fill diminished duty rosters.

William Carey, an aide to Mayor Henry Maier, said about 130 of the 300 firemen scheduled for duty today were out, the same number absent since the work action began Sunday. He said 170 firemen and 180 Guardsmen were manning the city's stations.

The New York firemen's strike added to the city's other strikes. The New York Daily News, the nation's largest-circulation newspaper, halted publication today, and another strike disrupted regular functioning of 48 privately owned voluntary hospitals and nursing homes.

Across the country, Trans World Airlines flights were grounded because of a strike of flight attendants.

The first New York firemen's picket line went up shortly after 8:30 a.m. EST across from the Summit Hotel where the all-night talks had been in progress.

Mediator Eric Schmertz refused to explain why the talks broke down other than to say, "Some progress was made but not enough progress to fill all the gaps."

"We had something that we could have lived with but Lindsay thinks that he's going to fight fires by himself," said one UFA negotiator. The fire fighters voted overwhelmingly Monday to stage the strike, despite a law which prohibits strikes by municipal employees.

In Milwaukee, there was no immediate indication whether firemen would obey a temporary restraining order issued by Circuit Court Judge Harvey Neelen.

Kissinger continues talks in Tunis

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger today left Morocco, the first stop on his Middle East peace tour, after seven hours of talks with King Hassan II in Rabat. His next stop was Tunis, for a meeting with President Habib Bourguiba, before continuing to Cairo tonight.

On the Golan Heights ceasefire line Syria reported its jets drove off two formations of Israeli planes that fired air-to-ground rockets at Syrian advance positions.

On the Suez cease-fire front, Israel reported new tensions and clashes with Egyptian troops.

As he left Rabat, Kissinger said his talks with Hassan "were conducted in an attitude of friendship but also contributed greatly to my understanding of the point of view of the Arab countries."

The secretary of state declared, "I leave here with an even greater determination and, I hope, greater courage, to contribute to bringing a peace to the Middle East that is just to all peoples of the Middle East."

Arab leaders were conferring busily meanwhile and diplomatic sources in Beirut said an Arab summit conference has been scheduled tentatively for mid-November in Algiers. King Hussein of Jordan, the latest to enter the rounds of Arab consultations, flew to Saudi Arabia. He is known to favor to summit of Arab heads of state.

Egyptian government spokesman Ahmed Anis said in Cairo that Kissinger's talks with President Anwar Sadat would be "of paramount importance."

Kissinger, a Jew making his first visit to the Arab world, got a warm reception in Rabat. The official newspaper Le Matin said in a front-page editorial that relations between Morocco, a major recipient of U.S. economic aid, and Washington have "never suffered the slightest deterioration or eclipse and have invariably remained filled with sincerity, cordiality and high mutual regard."

Kissinger's aides said he expects no spectacular breakthroughs on his trip but is trying to work out a procedure for Arab-Israeli peace negotiations and to smooth out such current problems as the Arab demand for Israeli troops to pull back from territory they occupied after the first cease-fire Oct. 22 and Israeli demands for an exchange of prisoners of war.

'One hope for Lisa's killer'

BY BILL KNUTSON

FOND DU LAC — "Turn yourself in," the Rev. Paul Plotter pleaded this morning as he stood over Lisa French's small white casket.

Maybe Lisa's killer was one of the hundreds of mourners sitting among the school children and the Girl Scouts in Immanuel Trinity Lutheran Church, Plotter guessed.

"We plead with you, for your own sake, to turn yourself in. Confess, seek psychiatric help. Therein is your only hope."

Plotter waited. Police with cameras waited. At the church and at Eastbrook Cemetery. But the little girl's killer is still loose, many believe in Fond du Lac.

"The alternative," Plotter addressed the killer, "is to be tormented by your conscience day and night ... until you enter into the Godforsakenness and damnation of hell."

If the person who molested and strangled Lisa French last Thursday heard Plotter's plea, he remained silent.

"Jesus' blood is powerful enough to cleanse even you," the killer was told. Plotter warned the killer not to place the blame for his deed on his parents or on his school or on his church, "if you ever had one."

"You had every reason to know right from wrong," Plotter insisted, and he could not help but know of the two commandments about killing and adultery, the minister said.

But, Plotter lamented, "If we sow sex perversion and pornography and immorality in every form, what do we expect to reap?"

The half-hour service was simple. Television cameras and photographers lined the sides of the old church.

Plotter recited from Paul. "We must be ready to face death at any moment of the day." And he read from Matthew. "Anyone who humbles himself as this little child is the greatest in the kingdom."

If one of 10,000 stars in the sky disappeared, Plotter sighed, the loss wouldn't even be noticed by the astronomer. And if one of 400 instruments in an orchestra went quiet, the music wouldn't stop

"But this loss cannot be compared with other losses."

The Bible has something to say to the 5,000 people who helped search for Lisa after she didn't come home from trick or treating last Wednesday, Plotter said.

And the Bible has something to say to Lisa's killer. "It's better to have a rock tied around your neck and to be thrown into the sea."

The City of Fond du Lac is numb, city manager Myron Medin told mourners. "Our community has been deeply shocked, perhaps as never before."

Children listened, sorrow written on their faces. A few of them cried quietly. They went to fourth grade with Lisa at Chegwinn School and they were in Girl Scout Troop 16 which Lisa had just joined.

They were children too young to understand the horror their tiny friend experienced Halloween night.

They were old enough and wise enough to know they would never see their friend again.

Rocket attack on air base in South Vietnam kills soldier, child

SAIGON (AP) — A rocket attack on the Bien Hoa air base before dawn today killed a soldier and a child, wounded 22 persons and destroyed three F5 fighter-bombers, the South Vietnamese military command reported. It said 23 of the 122mm rockets hit the base 15 miles north of Saigon and 12 exploded in civilian areas around it. The Viet Cong denied a claim by a government spokesman that the attack was the signal for a Communist general offensive, and observers believed that the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese were retaliating for government air attacks on Viet Cong territory.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Donald H. Segretti has been sentenced to six months in prison after pleading guilty to three misdemeanor charges in connection with political sabotage.

Segretti was charged with violating federal laws in his activities in the Democratic presidential primary in Florida.

He was sentenced to three years by U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard A. Segell, who then suspended sentence on condition that Segretti spend six months in a minimum security prison.

"I really regret I got involved in this," said the 32-year-old Segretti. He was indicted in Tampa, Fla., in charges of conspiracy and distributing campaign literature which did not identify the organization or the individual responsible for it.

LONDON (AP) — The Commemorative Collectors' Society of Britain estimates that more than $15.5 million worth of souvenirs of the wedding next week of Princess Anne and Capt. Mark Phillips will be sold, and the government will collect more than $500,000 in sales taxes.

Steven Jackson, the society's secretary, said it is "the most extensively exploited royal wedding" since 1933, when Anne's great-grandparents were married. They became King George V and Queen Mary.

SEOUL (AP) — Maeil Shinmun, a Catholic newspaper in Taegu, 150 miles northeast of Seoul, came out today with a blank space from which a 500-word account of an anti-government demonstration had been censored. The story, which the paper had planned to run on page seven, described a campus rally in Taegu Monday of about 700 university students accusing President Chung Hee Park of operating a dictatorship backed by the Korean Central Intelligence Agency. About 200 of the demonstrators marched out of the campus, but riot police broke up the march.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Guerrillas killed 24 Thai soldiers and militiamen in a weekend ambush in a sparsely populated area of northeast Thailand, the Communism Suppression Command reported today. Authorities said three terrorists told a patrolling militiaman that a Communist band was attacking a nearby militia post and help was needed badly. Two trucks and a jeep with more than 30 troops were sent to the rescue, and the guerrillas opened fire as they approached the camp. Reinforcements arrived by helicopter after the guerrillas disappeared.

MANILA (AP) — The International Rice Research Institute said today it has developed a new variety of rice — IR26 — that is "resistant or moderately resistant" to most major insects and diseases affecting rice in Asia. The Institute said the new strain has the highest yield of any of a number of varieties in both wet-season and irrigation growing. IR26 is comparable in taste to other varieties, the Institute said, and is resistant to a widespread fungus disease called tungro and to bacterial blight, brown plant-toppers and green leafhoppers.

LONDON (AP) — Jacqueline Du Pre, the 28-year-old cellist, is suffering from multiple sclerosis and will never play in public again, the Daily Mail reported today.

Friends said Miss Du Pre's husband, pianist-conductor Daniel Barenboim, is curtailing his foreign engagements to spend more time with her.

Miss Du Pre made her debut at 14 at London's Royal Festival Hall, studied with Pablo Casals, Paul Tortelier and Mstislav Rostropovich and became a blonde beauty and one of the world's leading cellists. She and Barenboim were married in Jerusalem in 1967.

She has not appeared in concert since February.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wisconsin Democrats Gaylord Nelson and William Proxmire were among only 12 senators voting Monday against a $21.3 billion weapons procurement bill.

The bill, sent to President Nixon 69-12, gives the administration nearly everything it asked for in weapons research, manpower and development authorization.

Proxmire called the bill inflationary, saying the "military budget is about to explode."

The measure contains $2.2 billion in military aid for Israel and $200 million more for Cambodia, Proxmire said, and the administration is preparing to ask "several billion dollars" more.

Americans 'energy pigs'

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Former Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall says Americans are "energy pigs" whose nation is operating on misguided assumptions that the energy crisis is a short-term problem.

Udall told a University of Virginia audience Monday night that the energy crisis is so severe "you can expect your first cold shower in about 60 days."

For Americans to dream of relying on Arab oil or to depend on increased drilling in the United States are foolish, shortsighted solutions, he said. Udall said the United States already is the most-drilled country in the world and oil supplies are becoming increasingly inaccessible.

He said energy conservation is the only practical long range solution and that Americans must prepare themselves for the end of the era of cheap energy.

He predicted the demise of the automobile culture and called for the rejuvenation of public transportation.

He also warned of the possibility of gasoline rationing in a few months, and he predicted gasoline prices probably would reach $1 a gallon for the average motorist within a year.

Rebozo allegedly given financial monopoly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several federal officials concede that recent regulatory actions have given President Nixon's friend Charles G. "Bebe" Rebozo a financial monopoly in Key Biscayne, Fla. But another official disagrees and denies any impropriety.

Thomas Bomar, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, said there was no improper contact with anyone influential.

He also denied that the board knew when it approved insurance for a Rebozo-connected savings and loan association that the comptroller of the currency was simultaneously considering an application for a bank to compete with Rebozo's.

Ultimately, the comptroller rejected the application, leaving Rebozo's bank as the only one in Key Biscayne.

Bomar defended the decision to grant federal insurance to a state-chartered savings and loan association to be housed in Rebozo's building on Key Biscayne. Two directors of the savings and loan association.

"We approved this case on the merit," Bomar told the House Banking subcommittee on bank supervision and insurance.

He disagreed with the description by subcommittee chairman Ferdinand J. St. Germain, D-R.I., of the situation as a Rebozo monopoly. Bomar said he expects the savings and loan association to be independent of the bank.

But a counsel for the board, Henry Judy, said it was "correct to say that a new financial institution can't be developed in there (Key Biscayne) and survive. So it is fair to say there is a monopoly."

No one willing to tell

SPANGLE, Wash. (AP) — The 179 residents of Spangle would rather do without a mayor and town council than disclose what they consider "their own personal business."

People in this east Washington town appear unanimous in their opposition to the state's new Public Disclosure Act, which requires candidates for public office to make full financial statements.

No one has filed for any one of the four council seats up for election. The fifth council member, retired rancher A.R. Byers, has two years to go on his term but says he will resign by the end of the year.

Mayor J.W. Schieche said, "Our sources of income, our property holdings and our debts are our own personal business."

Schieche, 48, who has been mayor eight of the past 12 years, runs a service station and has an automobile agency.

"I do business with 150 farmers around here," he said. "Anytime one of them might owe me $500 I'd have to report it. You can well imagine I'd have a bunch of farmers down my neck."

Schieche called an emergency caucus of the town's voters when no one filed for the council seats. All who were nominated refused to run after learning of the disclosure requirements.

The mayor's job pays $7.50 a month. Most people in Spangle expect the mayor and councilmen to be re-elected on a write-in basis. When that happens, "Then it's up to the governor... We won't serve if we have to file the declaration."

He wouldn't destroy tape, Saxby says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. designate William B. Saxby says he did not advocate destruction of the White House Watergate tapes if they proved incriminating.

He had been quoted by the Hong Kong Standard in an Aug. 23 speech as saying: "I think the President is right in standing on his rights not to release the tapes. I personally wish I had never heard of the tapes. If they're incriminating, they should be destroyed, and I'm sure they will; but I think he's right in saying that a president cannot be hounded around in the courts."

Saxby, a Republican senator from Ohio, said Monday that he recalled indicating that because President Nixon and others knew of the recording devices it was unlikely that anything embarrassing would have been said.

In a statement he said: "If the question is, was I advocating any illegal activity in the Hong Kong speech, the answer obviously is no. In response to a question after the Hong Kong speech, I indicated that if there was illegal activity recorded on the tapes, I questioned whether such tapes would ever be forthcoming."

Earlier, a spokesman for Saxby said the senator did not remember making the statement attributed to him by the Hong Kong newspaper.

Corrective ads not required for Wonder Bread

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission, while ruling that Wonder Bread's maker misled parents and children through trick photography, has avoided a court test of its authority to require advertisers to undo any false impression created by earlier advertisements.

The commission has negotiated agreements with several companies requiring them to run ads explaining that they had misled people earlier.

But the commission has never ordered an advertiser to run corrective ads, even though in the Wonder Bread case announced Monday the commission reaffirmed in principle that it has that power.

The five-member commission declared in the Wonder Bread case, over a dissent by Commissioner Mary Gardiner Jones, that the case didn't offer enough basis for corrective ads.

The ads in question have been phased out over the past two years in favor of a new campaign pegged to the freshness of bread rather than nutritional qualities. A Wonder Bread spokesman said the company had advertised since World War II that it built better bodies eight ways. The advantage expanded to 12 ways about 1969, when Wonder Bread started the "How big do you want to be?" series.

"Big enough to wear my daddy's shoes," a little boy would answer the unseen voice. And before your eyes the boy would put on six years' growth in a few seconds.

ITT Continental, makers of Wonder Bread, argued that the spots were mere "television fantasy" and were seen as such by children and adults alike. But the commission, basing its judgment on testimony from opinion researchers, concluded the "advertisements do represent Wonder Bread as having extraordinary properties to produce growth in children."

The fantasy sequence was one of seven items challenged in the Wonder Bread ads. The commission threw out the other six, as well as a complaint that Hostess snack cakes falsely claimed to be sources of good nutrition.

ITT Continental termed it gratifying that only one of the allegations was upheld and said it would appeal the commission order on the fantasy ads.

The commission order would require ITT Continental and its ad agency, Ted Bates and Co., to stop advertising any food product as promoting exceptional growth unless the statement could be proved.

Woman of the Year is busy at Nature Center

BY ALICE K. HUCK
Post-Crescent Women's Editor

QUESTION: Why do you see angieworms on the sidewalk during a rainstorm?

ANSWER: Because the worms live in tunnels, and they would be flooded in the ground.

QUESTION: Why shouldn't you put nuts in your pocket when you walk in the woods?

ANSWER: Because each woods is an animals' supermarket and they need the food in the woods to eat and to store in their cupboards for winter.

It is because more than almost 7,000 fourth graders have found answers to these questions, and others like them that Jane Williams was nominated this year by her 50 Nature Studies Trail Guides, to receive The Post-Crescent Woman of the Year Award. (Mrs. Williams shared the honor at the Oct. 25 Women's Department breakfast with Mabel McClanahan who was honored for work in an Appleton Career Awareness Program.)

Working closely with Mrs. Williams as the project grew from a three weeks spring and fall program in 1971 to a six weeks program in 1973, has been Alice Zeiss. As Jane Williams put it, "My responsibility has been curriculum and information. Alice's has been organization, and it is she who has recruited the wonderful, interested, inspired women who serve as guides for the children."

All of the guides are volunteers, many of them are self-taught. They expand their knowledge through reading the many books available at the center, at the libraries, and through "informational days" arranged for by Mrs. Williams. "The guides are the kind of women," Mrs. Williams said, "you would want your children to spend a day with."

For instance, early this fall in preparation for the onslaught of children, the guides met at the Morgan School Auditorium for movies, scheduling and studies on plants, animals, ponds and soil. Another day they boarded a bus for an all-day trip to the University of Wisconsin Arboretum. They spent two days setting up their stations at the pro shop and then attended a basic information day there on plant and animal groupings.

The basic plan of the fourth graders' all-day experience is given in a letter to teachers. Two classes come each day. At the center each class is divided into half, making four groups of children, each with a teacher or some other adult. The first activity is for the children to see and touch exhibits and games. They divide into groups and go to each of the four stations, two in the morning and two in the afternoon. Each child brings lunch and milk is available for a small charge.

The classes operate rain or shine, and children dress accordingly.

When the center started it worked out of the Leppla Farm barn, moving to the golf course pro shop this spring. As the course is nearing completion, the program will have to move, and the board now is searching for land and money for a simple building to house the displays and to hold the classes. As Alice Zeiss commented, "We expect to start here next spring, but we don't know where we'll be in the fall."

Many organizations and individuals have worked hard making displays. Others have contributed supplies or money.

Most important are lessons learned by the children and the more than 700 adults who have visited the center. The children have come from Kaukauna, Black Creek, Nichols, Appleton, Kimberly, Hortonville, Darboy, Shiocton, Little Chute, Freedom, Seymour, Combined Locks, Neenah, Menasha, Mackville and Greenville.

Mrs. Lloyd Williams is president of Outagamie Nature Studies, Inc. Secretary is Mrs. Kenneth Ligare and treasurer is George Miotke.

Other board members are John Bubolz, Joseph Dercks, Martin Downs, Mrs. Steven Freschl, Lee Hallberg, William Heckrodt, Kenneth Ligare, Jim Raber, Mrs. Victor Sumnicht, Mrs. E. J. Zeiss and O. A. Ziemann.

New board members will be elected at an annual meeting at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 14 at Appleton High School East. The public is invited to attend the meeting at which George Knudsen, chief naturalist with the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources, will speak.

Coordinator steps in

Alice Zeiss who coordinates the trail guides at the Outagamie Nature Center, filled in last week when a guide became ill. She shows

Britt Rohm and John Sigman details on a stuffed woodcock. On the branch are female mallards. The children are allowed to handle the birds.

Where's the queen?

Patty Kohn finds out how honey is made and hears the story about the queen, the drones and the worker bees. At left, Bill Marks will always remember the shape of the tracks of a deer.

Ann Landers

Consult mother before asking

Dear Ann Landers: I have never seen this problem in your column. Maybe no one else has ever had it. It is quite unusual.

We lost Dad when I was 15. I am 20 now. When Dad died, one of my men teachers became like a father to me. I went to him with my problems and he was just wonderful.

My boyfriend and I plan to marry next year. I want this teacher to give me in marriage, but I'm afraid it might create hard feelings in the family. I have an uncle who might feel put out. But I do want to give this teacher the honor—and let him know what he has meant to me. What do you say?—Oxnard, Calif.

Dear Oxnard: Your mother should be consulted. Her feelings are important. I suspect she'd prefer that your uncle give you in marriage, particularly if he is your dad's brother.

The teacher could be invited to sit with the family and be included in the pre-nuptial affairs, as if he were an uncle. (If he is married, his wife must, of course, be included.)

Dear Ann Landers: How old does a man have to be before he gets some brains? I was happily married for 38 years. We always worked on the farm together. The thought never crossed my mind that my husband would cheat on me. Then some nice neighborly people bought the place next to ours and the next thing I knew my husband had quite an affair going with their 30-year-old, unmarried daughter. It went on for two years (me dumb as a doornail until I caught them in the hay loft). The following week my husband had a heart attack that kept him in bed for eight months, plus another year to recuperate.

He promised the Lord if he ever got well he'd lead a Christian life. Well, Ann, he behaved for the next few years, and then another couple moved into the vicinity. We met them at church. The woman is in her mid-50s and plays the piano rather well so we invited them over for a musical evening. (My husband is good on the guitar and I play the zither).

I walked out of the room for a minute and when I returned I saw my husband give her a love-pat on the rear. Ann, it can't be sex in any other way but in his head, but it shocked me that he would act up again—if he could.

Please tell me how to think about this. I am upset and need guidance.—Red Rock, Oklahoma

Dear Red: Just tell him to keep his hands to himself because that woman's husband isn't blind and he might not take kindly to such gestures, in addition to which it's an insult to you.

Dear Ann Landers: I think you are fair to both sexes—in spite of occasional reader comments to the contrary. This question will require total detachment.

Is a wife entitled to a night out with the girls—just as a husband is entitled to his night out with the boys?—Let Me Be Me

Dear You: I assume by "a night out with the girls" you mean a hen party—card-playing or just gathering at a home for girl-talk. If so, the answer is yes. If you mean bar-hopping or going to a cocktail lounge and dancing with guys—the answer is no. (Copyright 1973)

Those free things are often most expensive

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

The songwriter may say that the best things in life are free, but the cynic has his own opinion on such matters. He will tell you that the free things are sometimes the most expensive. This was certainly the case with a bridge hand that was the talk of the New York bridge clubs some years ago.

Opening lead — ♣ 2

The bidding was excellent. If the play had been up to the same standard, we would have only to award a few medals and then go on to something else. But the play of this hand would never earn a medal.

South saw that the opening lead gave him a "free" finesse. Without stopping to think about the hand as a whole, South called for a low club from the dummy.

COSTLY MANEUVER

This maneuver cost him the grand slam — a matter of more than 2,000 points! Enough to please even the sourest of cynics.

South won the first trick with the jack of clubs and led out dummy's top trumps. He then had to get to his own hand to continue the task of drawing trumps.

The only chance was to cash two top diamonds and then ruff a diamond. If this plan worked, therefore, South would have to waste a top diamond in return for the free club trick.

As luck would have it, the plan didn't work. West ruffed the second diamond, defeating the grand slam. And South became famous for a time as the player who started a hand with 13 sure tricks, tried for 14 and wound up with only 12!

The point was that South had to save his king of clubs as the entry to his hand. The correct play is to win the first trick with dummy's ace of clubs, take dummy's top trumps and then lead a club to the king in order to draw the rest of the trumps. Then South can get rid of a club and a heart on dummy's extra top diamonds.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with a forcing bid of two hearts, and the next player passes. You hold: S-K J 7, H-J 5, D-8 7, C-Q J 10 9 8 3. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid 2-NT. Some experts might bid three clubs, but this is a doubtful course with a topless suit when you must raise the level of bidding. Most experts want a better suit or more top cards to raise the level.

Stars step from fashion formats

By BOB THOMAS

Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Where do the new female stars come from? Right out of the fashion magazines and television commercials, according to the current trend.

The old movie story that starlets are plucked from chorus lines and malt shop stools is now just legend. Film producers now pick high-fashion models.

Examples: Marisa Berenson, who appeared in "Death in Venice," "Cabaret" and is now starring with Ryan O'Neal in a Stanley Kubrick film.

Cybill Shepherd, director Peter Bogdanovich's star on and off the screen. She appeared in his "Last Picture Show," is now making "Daisy Miller" for him and also played the cool heiress in "The Heartbreak Kid."

Jennifer O'Neill, the beauty who brought love to teen-age Gary Grimes in "The Summer of '42". Her other films: "Lady Ice," "The Carey Treatment."

Twiggy, who did a creditable job in "The Boy Friend" and recently filmed a thriller called "W."

All MacGraw, the star of "Goodbye, Columbus" and "Love Story" who married the boss of Paramount, Robert Evans, then left him for her "Getaway" co-star, Steve McQueen.

Latest to join the ranks of model-stars is Ann Turkel, whose slim brunette beauty has appeared on the cover of every fashion magazine in the United States and Europe. She is appearing opposite Richard Harris in "99 and 44-100 per cent Dead," directed by John Frankenheimer for 20th Century-Fox.

Having gone from cover girl to star in her first film, Turkel would seem to offer a case history for the casting trend. She denies it.

"I studied acting since I was 5," she said. "I was taking dramatic lessons from Sandy Meisner at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York and I was 14 and I began playing in summer stock at 16.

"I went into modeling only because I thought it was better to be known as an employed model than an unemployed actress."

Her tall willowy frame and high-cheeked enigmatic face made her an immediate favorite with fashion photographers and magazine editors. After her first year as a model, she almost fulfilled her acting desires. Paramount picked her to star in a musical remake of "Roman Holiday," calling her a "present-day Audrey Hepburn." But the project never got off the ground, and she went back to modeling.

Her view of the model's life gives a hint on why so many of them seek careers in films.

"I'd be a liar if I didn't say it was boring," she remarked. "I know people are indignant when I say so; they ask, 'How can anything that pays so well be boring?' Well, it is."

"There are some photographers, like Richard Avedon, who are fun to work with. But with most of them it is sheer boredom."

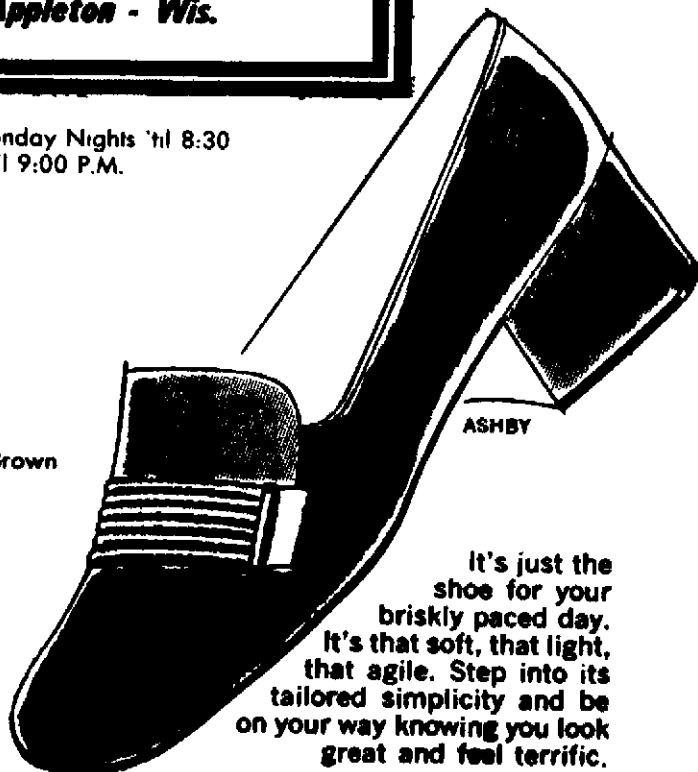

During five years as a model, Ann Turkel made between $80,000 and $100,000 a year posing for the fashion pages and an occasional television commercial. She could have made more if she had been willing to take all kinds of modeling jobs.

Cooking vacation

LaVerne Chandler readies a camp-out picnic for boys at a California mountain camp, assisted by a young man who was himself a camper.

AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — LaVerne Chandler spent her hard-earned vacation getting burned, bruised and calloused and she loved every minute of it.

The attractive executive secretary, 50, wasn't punishing herself. She was the volunteer cook of three meals a day for 100 persons at a California boys' camp.

From the 51st floor office where she works, looking across Manhattan to the East River, Miss Chandler admitted the rugged camp in California's high Sierra seems far away.

"But the camp was still a little more my style than this office," said the soft-voiced Texas native.

Miss Chandler moved to a New York suburb nine years ago when her boss was named chairman of the board of the Exxon Corp. She had always done volunteer work with the Red Cross, or hospitals, but she had never dreamed of becoming a camp cook. She could cook, she said, but it was mostly for herself.

"I read an article about the R. M. Pyles Boys' Camp in the Sequoia National Forest. It explained the goals: that the boys came from underprivileged families selected by lawmen, welfare workers, probation officers and school teachers; that they were from 11 to 16 and had lived mostly in city conditions. And that the camp dared the boys to become men. It challenged them to do their best.

"Really, I'm a flag waver at heart," Miss Chandler said. "It was an idea I approved of. The camp is supported by the California oil industry. The work was teaching self-respect and respect for others."

At first the neatly dressed, tall white-haired woman couldn't think what she might do to help the camp. Then she read about the cooks. She impulsively called the camp director and volunteered to spend a month in the kitchen, and he accepted her offer.

"He asked first if I'd ever cooked for any large groups before, and I said I thought I could learn," she recalled. "I went to the people who handle food service in our building and got them to take me on as a trainee," Miss Chandler added.

For four months, the secretary rose at 4 a.m., got to her office by 6 and worked at her desk until the company cafeteria opened. From 6:30 to 8:30 a.m., she was an unpaid trainee with the chef, the pastry cook and the short order grill operator. Then she went to the office and handled a full day's duties as executive secretary.

"The more I learned, the more I got cold feet about feeding all those hungry boys," she said. "My feet got colder as the time for leaving got closer."

The novice chef arrived in Bakerfield on a Saturday, drove into the mountains to camp and almost immediately started cracking eggs for Sunday morning's scrambled eggs breakfast.

"From that time on, I was going all the time," Miss Chandler said. "I lost 12 pounds. I couldn't eat at first because of the climate and altitude change. And then, some days, I just didn't have time."

Dubbed "Tex" by the campers because of her accent, the secretary was involved in hot rolls, which she claims campers inhaled rather than chewed, great batches of cookies and lots of cakes and ice cream.

"I had only one real failure, shortly after my arrival. I scorched a cream sauce base for macaroni and cheese. The kids claimed it didn't really taste too bad. They were very kind to me, but, all in all, I have no illusions about how great a cook I was," Miss Chandler added.

She says the best part of her vacation was seeing the change in boys who came to camp for two weeks. The camp, she added, does something to everyone who goes there, to every camper and every staff member.

"There's a wonderful feeling, a lot of love, and I felt it directed to me. When I came back to New York, it was a let-down. I had been floating," she said.

Soon LaVerne Chandler will begin some refresher courses in the cafeteria kitchens of her skyscraper office.

"I'm going back to camp next summer," she said, "and this time, I'll just help the regular cook. But I can hardly wait, all the same."

Bouncy hair just a beauty routine away

How often have you wished that you were the person with the chic hairstyle, the one with the shine, the bounce, the obvious healthiness that looks so All American? Not everyone has a beautiful head of hair. Here are some tips to help correct some hair problems.

If hair is dry, stimulation is the solution. Brush and massage daily, shampoo weekly and give yourself a once-a-month conditioning. Part the hair in inch-wide portions and rub warm olive oil or mineral oil down each part. Massage the scalp for five minutes and wrap the head in a hot, damp towel. Cover this with a dry towel to keep in the heat. Change towels at 20-minute intervals for an hour, then thoroughly shampoo.

Split ends and dry ends make it seem like hair never grows. This problem is somewhat alleviated by the same conditioning procedure. Treatment, a frequent trim and gentle brushing are the main remedies.

Oily hair needs less massaging — brush only before and after a shampoo — and more washing. Shampoo every other day, if necessary.

Fine, limp hair responds well to a blunt cut. If this is your problem, remember that freshly-washed hair looks twice as thick.

Some problems can only be handled by a good cut. Coarse, wiry, curly hair should be shaped often and styled to take advantage of body and curl. Very thick hair can easily be thinned by a professional.

Thin hair, on the other hand, like falling hair, could be the result of poor diet. It may indicate a physical upset, illness or general run-down condition. Cut off straggly ends. Wear hair in a short style, remembering that long hair increases the pull on weakened hair roots. Regular massages, with or without oil, may help. Thin hair should be brushed vigorously; falling hair should not be brushed at all. Bear in mind that hair is normally lost during brushing and consult a doctor if loss is excessive or prolonged.

Dandruff is thought to be caused by bacteria on the scalp, although it is not known why some people are bothered with it while others are not. Shampooing with an anti-dandruff shampoo may control it. If not, see a doctor.

Union women take action

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The AFL-CIO's male-dominated executive board, the state's rape laws and even the two men depicted on the official state seal were censured Sunday by the union's women's conference.

The 4th annual convention of the auxiliary adopted resolutions whose topics ranged from support for United Farm Workers Union boycotts to demands for impeachment of President Nixon.

The distaff delegates complained that the state AFL-CIO's executive panel has no women, and that few women are found in executive capacity anywhere in the organization.

Jack Reihl, secretary of the union, told delegates how to nominate women for state commissions.

"If the AFL-CIO is to be progressive, we must involve the youth, the senior citizen who is retired, the rank and file of its members, be it men or women," Reihl said.

The weekend convention, attended by about 210 delegates, approved a resolution in support of suggestions by State Rep. Herbert Grover of Shawano to replace the state's Great Seal, whose design is 92 years old.

The conference leader, Helen Henslen, said the "coat of arms shows nothing but men, and they are all white."

Included in the seal's 19th century insignia are sketches of a miner and a Great Lakes merchant sailor.

Miss Henslen said the seal should represent ethnic minorities, remarking: "It does not necessarily have to be a seal with any faces either. It just should not have any discrimination."

Another resolution called for more humane treatment of rape victims, saying women should have a stronger voice in law enforcement decisions concerning rape cases.

Existing rape statutes are indecent to victims, delegates said.

Blindness adds to power

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer
OAK HILL, Tex. (AP) — It had been a good practice for June Collins: she had doubled and scored, sliding under her coach's tag. She had scooped up a swinging bunt and thrown a runner out. She had been lucky, too, not having to handle any of those towering, twisting fouls that give catchers fits.

On occasion Mrs. Collins, 27, the catcher for the women's championship softball team at the First Baptist Church, staggers under plummeting popups like a blind woman.

The game is slow-pitch, and her team won its Austin-Oak Hill division twice this year. To "see" the championship trophies she caressed them with her fingers.

First Baptist won 20, lost four and tied the Free Church and Mrs. Collins says she was her fault. Grabbing a wide throw, she misjudged in diving to tag the runner and plopped three feet from the plate.

"I went home and cried," she says. Against Faith Lutheran, she fell rounding third and clawed the ground, less than half an inch from the unseen bag. She was tagged out.

Squatting at bat without her sunglasses, she swung and missed. "What's the matter, you blind? If you had glasses on, you might hit it," taunted an unknown opponent.

Coach James Nichols checked three games at random and said his blind catcher had gone 4-for-10. She never struck out all season.

She was so good that only Woodlawn Baptist and one umpire detected her blindness, says Nichols. He set up a recent practice game with Woodlawn and invited an Associated Press reporter and photographer to watch her play.

Her fair skin flushed from practice, with friends and relatives seated nearby, Mrs. Collins said in an interview, "Normal persons think of me as handicapped. My friends, my real friends, don't."

"When Mr. Nichols first told me you were coming out, I was sick to my stomach. I didn't want to appear to be a side show freak act. But I thought my story might help other handicapped persons."

To hit a softball she cannot see, Mrs. Collins relies on years of experience, psychology, other voices and tips from her teammates. She was hesitant to reveal her batting secrets.

She bats last. That allows her to ask eight other hitters how the pitcher is throwing. She always lets the first two pitches go by to give her a sense of timing, and often the unsuspecting umpire will call where the pitch was — "Ball, high," for example. "Good eye," she quips if the pitch is out of the strike zone.

"vision opening his eyes under water," says a doctor.

"But momma wouldn't pamper me," she recalls. "She refused to send me to the state blind school and insisted on raising me at home."

"Oh, the tears I cried as a child," she remembers, "when the other kids would yell — 'June can't see, she can't hit the ball.'"

She refused to quit, bouncing a rubber ball off a wall for hours each day, playing catch with her cousins and hitting rocks with a stick.

"In softball you get your timing when you're young, and you never lose it. I've been playing softball all my life, and I've coached it and there are very few things I don't know about it."

For years, "I could see the ball — it was fuzzy — right before it got to the plate," she says, "but last January I woke up one morning and I couldn't see anything. I was totally blind."

John Nichols — "She's the first I know that got her softball uniform and Braille books for Sunday school the same day."

An honor graduate of Dripping Springs High School, Mrs. Collins also played basketball and she tells an anecdote that illustrates her refusal "to be set apart from the crowd."

She said the basketball coach was trying to decide whether to give the last letter sweater to her — even though she lacked a quarter of playing enough to letter — or another girl. "He chose the other girl, and I've always liked him for that," she says.

She has worked for the Texas Commission for the Blind and now teaches physical education at the First Baptist Day Care Center, near where she lives with her mother. She is separated from her husband. Their son, Jason, 6, has vision problems, but they are less severe than his mother's.

Nichols gave her a trophy as the "most courageous" player on the softball team and she displays it proudly, but she says, "My greatest honor would be for my teammates not to know I was blind."

"I'm not a super woman," she says, but her expression softens. She appears to be daydreaming. "Now if I could play tennis, that would be super fantastic."

Phase 4 exception too late

Better late than never? Sometimes.

In the case of the city's appeal to the federal Cost of Living Council for an exception to price freeze regulations so it could levy an increased sewer user fee, the good news came too late to mean anything.

The city was notified this week that the Council had granted the exception to price freeze standards which expired Aug. 12. The city could apply the increased rates retroactively to July 1, the Council said.

Politically, however, Director of Public Works Robert Miller cautioned members of the Street and Sanitation Committee Monday, that would be "utterly suicidal."

So the increased rates will appear on quarterly water bills going out at the end of November. It will only cover the previous three months, however, and not be retroactive to July 1, when the City Council ordered that the increased sewer user fee go into effect.

What that means is that the $45,000 sewage plant operation deficit that Miller predicted would result if the city did not raise its fee July 1 will have to be paid out on general city tax revenues.

The city filed its appeal for an exception to the Phase 4 economic controls Aug. 16. It wanted to be allowed to break freeze standards in order to implement a 20 per cent hike in its base user fee rate and a 23.5 per cent jump in the rate for consumption over the base quantity of 500 cubic feet of water.

Part of the justification used by the city in its appeal was that the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) requires that sewage plant operations pay operating costs out of a user fee, and the city couldn't do that if it didn't raise its rate, in order to qualify for EPA sewage plant construction grants.

"Strict adherence to the price freeze regulations and the use of the city's general taxing authority to raise sufficient revenues to offset the 1973 fiscal deficit would therefore require the city to forego grants furnished by EPA," wrote Bert Conklin, administrator of the Office of Price Stabilization in Washington. "The consequences of such strict adherence to the price freeze regulations (i.e. the loss of EPA grant funds) would result in a serious hardship to the city."

The alternative of borrowing money to offset the deficit in 1973

Initial OK for E. College Blvd.

BY FRANK CHURCH
Post-Crescent staff writer

The tangled E. College Avenue paving controversy took another unexpected turn Monday when the Appleton Street and Sanitation Committee recommended drawing up plans for a boulevard between Drew and Rankin streets.

The decision came after Public Works Director Robert Miller told the committee that while his budget recommendation that a temporary, 32-foot wide pavement might save the city some initial expense, the boulevard plan would carry better long term results for the area.

It will also cost more. The 32-foot temporary pavement carried a price tag of $36,700. The boulevard plan would cost $189,000. Roughly $150,000 of that cost would be paid by the city.

The committee's recommendation goes to the City Council Wednesday, which can decide whether to put money for it in the 1974 budget. The actual recommendation is to proceed with design work, but does not specify a construction date.

There is currently nothing in the budget for the E. College project. Miller's original proposal to widen the street to 32 feet with concrete was taken out because of its high cost, also $189,000. In its place, Miller suggested a 32-foot asphalt pavement, which would last 10 years but give traffic in the area some relief until, and if, a bypass plan is implemented to carry traffic north of College Avenue.

Miller's less expensive proposal was taken out of Mayor James Sutherland's executive budget last week. The finance committee wanted to see the long-range recommendations of the city's planning consultants, Harland Bartholomew and Associates, before making any recommendations.

Indecision over when the work would be done remained at Monday's street and sanitation meeting. Ald. Edward Maloney (8th), said "if and when" work is done on the 2,100 foot stretch of roadway, it should follow the boulevard concept.

Miller told the committee that if it was looking for a "cheap, first cost solution," the temporary pavement was the route to go. It would be "better off building the boulevard" if "you can afford it," he added, however.

Lawrence University President Thomas Smith said that for "aesthetic" and "safety" reasons, the boulevard concept was more acceptable than the street widening proposal. But he said he hoped "all alternate bypasses are examined very carefully" when the committee mulls long-term solutions to the area's traffic and pedestrian problems.

Planning consultants will let the city know what they envision as a long-term traffic plan for the area by Jan. 1. At that time, the city can decide whether it wants to follow that recommendation or move in some other direction.

But whatever it does, officials agree, something has to be done before the ten years it will take to implement a bypass plan is up.

Miller said the boulevard proposal.

School tax levy okayed

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent staff writer

Apparently content with the school tax decrease created by a state-imposed budget limitation, the Appleton public school's Fiscal Control Board unanimously approved a proposed 1974 school operating budget local tax levy without demanding the usual additional cuts from the board of education request.

Having demanded cuts as high as nearly $600,000 in recent years, the fiscal board, the district's financial arm, approved a local tax levy of $8,676,262 for 1974 school budget purposes. This compares with $8,993,073 levied for the 1973 school budget and is less than $300,000 more than the amount levied for the 1972 budget.

Mrs. Mabel McClanahan, board of education president, pleaded at the fiscal board hearing that the school board budget proposal not be cut. She said the proposed budget would mean a local tax rate reduction in Appleton of $1.77 per $1,000 of assessed valuation, without considering debt retirement payments or normal valuation increases.

The normal increased property valuation in the district, and the shift of about 2 per cent of the valuation share to the Town of Grand Chute because of the town's greater valuation increase, should result in nearly a $4 decrease in the city school tax rate. Also, the re-evaluation of a portion of the city contributed to the rate change.

School officials don't have figures available for the four towns in the district, but they expect total tax dollars requested from the towns of Menasha, Harrison and Buchanan to drop. While the total dollars from Grand Chute will increase, the town's valuation rise may absorb that cost.

School officials are delighted that the fiscal board decided not to cut the budget, which already was limited to about a $715,000 increase by the state-imposed increase controls that accompanied an increase in state aids. The total 1974 operating budget will be $13,613,268, or about $1.9 million more than the 1973 budget of $11.7 million.

About $1.1 million of the budget increase is needed to cover the added cost of the employer's share of teacher retirement and Social Security premiums from the state to the local school district. The board will be forced to draw on about $300,000 of 1974 State school aids to pay for the newly required share of retirement and Social Security payments for the July 1, 1973 to Dec. 31, 1973 period because the new state law went into effect last July 1.

Commenting on the no-cut budget approval, District Administrator Orlyn Zieman said: "I don't remember it ever happening. The Fiscal Control Board must have been satisfied that the board of education, by staying within the cost control limits, must have had a reasonable budget."

Mrs. McClanahan told the fiscal board Monday night that "we think, I repeat, we think we can maintain the same level of education (with this budget), but quite frankly, we're not sure."

The fiscal board cut $395,976 of a $10,706,257 request in 1971. That was the biggest cut of the past five years which saw cuts of over $235,000 in 1968, $415,000 in 1969, $325,000 in 1970, $257,500 in 1972 and $100,000 in 1973.

These cuts came after the board of education had previously reduced ini-

Cold month could bring fuel pinch

The abnormally cold, early November days may bring on the first noticeable pinch on the Fox Valley's fuel oil, but local suppliers aren't pushing the panic button yet. The month-long projection is for normal temperatures.

While the dealers are not experiencing a shortage, one said the public should not ignore the problem.

"It's as critical as the experts are forecasting, but the public just doesn't believe them," one local dealer said. "They'll find out fast, as soon as the weather turns."

Other dealers were buoyed by above-normal temperatures in October. While they can't shift leftover October supply to November under strict quota allocations set up by oil companies, some say they expect they can buy fuel elsewhere if abnormal cold increases November demands.

Meanwhile, Gov. Patrick J. Lucey and the Wisconsin Office of Emergency Energy Assistance hopes that residents will listen to their pleas for conservation and the elimination of waste of fuels, such as by not heating garages unnecessarily.

But steps at the state level still haven't been taken to determine what the supply to the state will be, where it will come from and how it might be handled. A spokesman for the emergency office said the governor was unhappy the legislature hadn't authorized the Wisconsin Public Service Commission to seek these answers.

The office has recommended a priority allocation system, if the need arises, with hospitals, nursing homes and residences at the top of the list; agricultural operations producing food, second, and essential services, such as fire, police, ambulance, and sewer and water next.

The below normal temperatures this month were topped Monday when the average temperature dropped to 25 degrees, 14 below normal. The temperature was 41 degrees, or one below normal on Nov. 2; 36 or four below normal, Nov. 3; 30 or nine below Nov. 4, and the temperature hit a low of 15 today and is expected to continue below normal.

Temperatures for the rest of this week are expected to be below normal, ranging from the 20s to the 40s. Normally, the range would be 29 to 48.

Fuel oil dealers evaluate the temperature by determining the heating degree days—that is, the average daily temperature and how far that is below 65 degrees, supposedly the satisfactory heating level.

$500,000 city budget cut asked

Four persons spoke on Appleton's proposed 1974 budget in what several aldermen said was the shortest public hearing they can recall in years shorter than a half-hour.

The longest statement came from a representative of the Appleton Taxpayers Association, which called on the City Council to reduce the proposed tax levy for city purposes by at least $500,000.

James Winchell charged that the tax levy for city purposes, as proposed in Mayor James Sutherland's executive budget, will jump 26 per cent and net expenditures will jump more than 30 per cent, or $3.6 million.

The budget's net tax levy is down some 1.4 per cent, but the association said this is largely the result of the increased state tax credit.

"This is not a reduction in taxes at all, but is a payment by the state for the taxpayer of a portion of the property taxpayers," Winchell said. "The taxpayers actually pay for this refund through other state taxes. Therefore, the executive budget should place less emphasis on the net tax rate and more emphasis on the rates required for city and school purposes."

Appleton League of Women Voters President Marya Fritzel supported the $175,000 subsidy to Fox River Bus Lines, a $25,000 appropriation for further work on the city's comprehensive plan and $15,500 for the mayor's administrative assistant. The league also asked the city to adopt a long-range capital improvements plan—something also urged by the taxpayers association—so aldermen can "make intelligent decisions this year and in future years on what items should be bonded, what items should go on the tax levy and what items the city will have to do without."

The budget goes for adoption Monday to the City Council. Before that, however, the finance committee Thursday will review the additions they have already made (which increase the tax levy another $228,000) and decide what kind of 1974 bond issue to recommend to the City Council.

The two other representatives Monday supported $10,000 for construction of pedestrian ramps in the downtown area.

Fewer than 30 persons were in the audience for the hearing, and several of those were there for the public hearing on the school district budget that preceded the city budget session.

Other specific recommendations made by the taxpayers association were:

— Cut the proposed $200,000 contingency fund in half to "encourage city agencies to make greater efforts to stay within their regular appropriation limits."

— Move to cut the contingency fund to $150,000 failed before the finance committee last week.

— Limit capital improvements to "those carrying the highest priority at this time" and develop a long-range plan before submission of the 1975 executive budget.

— Examine possibilities for cutting personnel through a review by the personnel director and department heads.

— Check for possible reductions in the assessor's budget, because the state will be taking over the assessment of all manufacturing property Jan. 1.

The assessor's budget shows a $2,000 plus increase, to $78,719, but Assessor George Schwarzbauer said the increase was the result of increased pay for union employees.

— See if the old vocational school property can be sold or converted into a revenue producing property.

— Transfer fringe benefits for sewage plant employees into the account handled by the sewer user fee, which would mean a property tax levy reduction of between $34,000 and $50,000. The association also suggested placing fringe benefits, which total $1.5 million for 1974, into a separate account.

— Break the budget document into four sections: general city, public improvements, school budget and tax levies of other taxing bodies.

D. C. Eagle freed while awaiting trial

A member of a Chicago area motorcycle gang, held for nearly a week in the Outagamie County jail pending possible probation revocation proceedings, was released Monday after no court action was taken against him.

The man, Robert E. Freeman, 37, of Chicago, is free on bond pending his Jan. 4 trial in Green Lake County for an assault charge brought last Tuesday in Berlin.

Freeman was one of the defendants in the D.C. Eagles case, which involved the abduction and rape of two Appleton girls in and near Appleton and Little Chute last Feb. 25.

Freeman was one of five defendants who was found guilty of having sexual intercourse with a minor, and Acting Circuit Judge Robert Pfiffner of Chippewa Falls placed him on probation for five years and ordered that the defendant stay out of Wisconsin during that period.

Freeman's appearance in Berlin appeared to be in conflict with Pfiffner's order that he remain out of the state, but no action was taken against Freeman after Pfiffner conferred with Freeman's probation agent here.

Pfiffner told The Post-Crescent today that it would have been very difficult to revoke Freeman's probation only because the man returned to Wisconsin. He questioned whether this would really have constituted solid grounds for revoking probation, and that by imposing such a condition, he knew he was dealing in a "gray area," since argument could be made that the condition was not valid.

Freeman's agent said his client could still face probation revocation if he is convicted on the Green Lake County charge.

County attorney refuses to draw up contract for unified board head

Outagamie County Corp. Counsel William Schuh this morning said he would not draw up a contract for the hiring of a program services director for the unified health services board.

The board had recommended the hiring of a director at a salary of $23,000 and directed Schuh to draw up the contract.

Schuh told the county board's coordinating committee that until money for the position is approved by the county board through adoption of the unified health services board's budget the position could not be filled.

"The county board has the authority to set the salary through the budget," Schuh said, "and to my knowledge this has not yet been done."

He said he agreed that the unified board had the authority to hire the director and to set his salary, but only within an approved range.

Supv. Marvin Babbitt, chairman of the personnel committee, said he met with three representatives of the unified board Monday after they had been informed of Schuh's action and "it appears they were asking us to take them off the hook."

He said the personnel committee has not been involved in the unified board's actions and "we are not in a position to approve or disapprove."

Both County Board Chairman Russell DeLaHunt and Supv. George Schroeder suggested that the unified board bring in a table of organization to the county board, along with recommended salary ranges, for approval with their budget.

DeLaHunt and Schroeder both are members of the unified board and had voted against approving the $23,000 salary. DeLaHunt said he felt the county "should try for someone on the way up, rather than pay for someone already at the top" as is the person being recommended for the job.

Babbitt suggested that it was up to the unified board to bring in a resolution with the salary ranges, rather than expect the personnel or coordinating committee to do so.

The coordinating committee also held in abeyance a bill for $1,250 submitted by Dennis Herring for defending Health Center Supt. Eugene Speener during a John Doe investigation and court proceedings resulting from the John Doe.

Schuh said it was his interpretation of

Speener disregards subpoena

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post-Crescent staff writer

On advice from his attorney, who called for an end to "the witch hunt," Eugene K. Speener, Outagamie County Health Center superintendent, disregarded a subpoena to appear at a Board of Social Services meeting Monday afternoon.

At the suggestion of County Board Chairman Russell DeLaHunt, an attempt will be made to set up an informal meeting with Speener so the social services board can again try to get answers to questions it has about Speener and his operation of the Health Center. No date was set for the meeting, which DeLaHunt said he wants to attend.

Speener's attorney, Dennis Herring, gave notice, however, that his client probably will not answer some personal questions that also went unanswered Monday.

When Speener declined an invitation to appear at the meeting, Chairman Eugene Higgins subpoenaed him through the sheriff's department Monday morning.

Higgins said state statutes give a county board committee chairman subpoena power.

Herring argued that the power is given only to chairmen of committees authorized to investigate the affairs of the county or its officials.

Herring quoted Corp. Counsel William Schuh as saying that the county board had not given investigative or subpoena authority to the board of social services.

Therefore, Herring told the board, he advised Speener not to obey the subpoena.

Herring charged the board with "a veiled threat to intimidate and coerce" Speener by ordering his appearance. He spent much of the time damning The Post-Crescent for "overpublicizing" and "sensationalizing" issues involving Speener and the Health Center over the past six months.

Speener's rights, according to Herring, "have been trampled upon, disregarded and cast aside and he has been subjected to far more than I think he is required to take."

Supv. John Kellogg recited the questions the board would have asked Speener. The questions, according to Kellogg, reflect the board's concern over the way Speener runs the Health Center.

The questions have nothing to do with the three criminal charges that were brought against Speener after a

John Doe investigation, Kellogg said. The charges were dismissed at a preliminary hearing last month.

Kellogg told Herring the board wants to know:

— Why the per patient cost at the Health Center is so much higher than at Riverview Sanatorium and County General Hospital and is among the highest in Wisconsin.

— If Speener intentionally omitted his Outagamie application in 1967. The Post-Crescent reported that he was a caseworker supervisor in the Barron County Welfare Department from March, 1968, to September, 1969.

The former welfare director in Barron County said Speener "had trouble establishing and maintaining

Kaukauna youth dies after pistol accident

Post-Crescent news service

GREEN BAY — Mark R. Rennie, 17, Kaukauna, died Monday afternoon of a bullet wound he suffered Sunday while target shooting with two companions.

Rennie, a senior at Kaukauna High School, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rennie, 1800 Kenneth Ave.

According to Brown County authorities, the youth suffered extensive head injuries after a .22 caliber pistol held by one of his companions accidentally discharged, striking the Rennie youth in the back of the head.

Authorities gave this account: Rennie, David Yingling, 18, also of Kaukauna, and Greg Danner, 16, rural Kaukauna, had been hunting in a wooded area off School Road in the Town of Greenleaf.

The boys returned to their car and placed two shotguns and a rifle they had been using in the back seat. Yingling then removed a handgun owned by his brother from the car. He placed three cartridges in the pistol and took one shot at some cans lying in a ditch.

Because the gun didn't discharge properly, Yingling pulled back the hammer and turned the cylinder. As he lifted the weapon to examine it, it discharged to his left, in Rennie's direction.

Yingling saw the youth fall and

ergate panel seeks to meet Nixon et his side of story

ON (AP) — The Senate committee today sought White House lawyers to obtain his account of scandal.

Chairman Sam J. Ervin said after an executive session committee would be willing to meet with the President in the White House and question him — if necessary without Nixon testifying under oath.

"We'd be happy to have him come down here and testify under oath," Ervin said, "but this relates to a meeting with him in the White House."

The action followed a discussion behind closed doors of a letter to the committee by one of its members, Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn. Weicker proposed that committee members seek a private White House meeting with Nixon and publish a record of the meeting afterward.

Committee lawyers were instructed to meet with presidential counsel to determine if the proposed White House meeting with Nixon was possible.

The new initiative came as the committee prepared to hear the testimony of four witnesses called by the Republicans to discuss alleged so-called dirty tricks perpetrated against the Nixon re-election campaign last year.

The first witness was Truman Campbell, county Republican chairman in Fresno, Calif.

Campbell was said to have information about distribution of anti-Nixon leaflets.

The others were identified as Mike Heller of Los Angeles, who is said to have information about the distribution of anti-Nixon leaflets, and Trumand Campbell, the county Republican chairman in Fresno, Calif.

It was not known who would testify first.

Campbell was reported ready to testify about alleged payments of McGovern campaign funds to members of the United Farm Workers union headed by Cesar Chavez.

He also was expected to testify on the disruption of a rally for President Nixon in Fresno last year.

Two of the three witnesses in the campaign financing area are Mexican-Americans who work or worked inside the Nixon administration.

The committee reportedly is exploring the relationship between the Nixon campaign's political overtures to Spanish-speaking voters and an alleged pre-election surge in government contracts to members of that group.

Ford hearings nearly completed

WASHINGTON (AP) — After only two days of televised testimony, the Senate Rules Committee appears almost ready to wrap up public hearings on the nomination of Vice President-designate Gerald R. Ford.

Chairman Howard W. Cannon, D-Nev., said the committee will meet in closed session Wednesday to hear Robert N. Winter-Berger, a former lobbyist who has made a series of allegations against Ford, and from Dr. Arnold Hutschnecker, a New York psychiatrist.

Beyond that, Cannon said, the committee has been contacted by only one witness — Rep. Donald M. Fraser, D-

Minn., chairman of Americans for Democratic Action — who wants to testify against Ford.

Cannon was asked Monday night by waited so long to disclose that two of his Watergate-related conversations were never recorded.

Meskill said he has reached no conclusion as to whether the President should resign but hoped that nothing of the kind happened before the Congress confirms House republican leader Gerald R. Ford to be vice president.

In his speech in Denver, Dominick also urged Congress to confirm Ford quickly. And he said the investigations started by Cox should be continued without interruption and insulated from all outside influence.

Dominick said he believes Republicans have more reason than anyone to be upset about the current situation and said they must act before public confidence disintegrates.

"Frankly, I'm damned mad about it," Dominick said. "The Republican party did not get us into this mess."

He said there has been little cooperation between Republican leaders and the Nixon administration since the 1970 congressional elections and said the fault lies with the White House.

"I believe the Republican party would be well advised to follow a more independent course from here on," Dominick said.

Martin Agronsky on the Public Broadcasting Television Network's "Evening Edition" program whether he thought Ford had shown in the hearings he is qualified to hold the presidency.

"Based on what we know now, I would believe that Ford would make a good president for the next three years if he were thrust into that position," Cannon replied.

He emphasized that he disagrees with Ford's views on a number of issues but said he expected President Nixon to choose someone with whom he was philosophically compatible.

Cannon said it was possible the committee could end its investigation of Ford next week, sending the nomination to the Senate floor soon afterward.

The House Judiciary Committee has set Nov. 13 as the tentative starting date for hearings, indicating Ford could be installed as vice president before Thanksgiving Day.

The Rules Committee's Monday afternoon session heard statements from 10 House members endorsing Ford, a House member from Michigan for 25 years and House Republican leader for eight.

The endorsements ranged from that of Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, who sought the Republican presidential nomination in 1972 as a hard-line conservative, to that of Rep. Paul N. McCloskey, R-Calif., who for a time ran for the presidency as an antiwar candidate.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., author of the constitutional amendment under which Congress is considering a vice-presidential nomination for the first time, said differences of political opinion should not influence Ford's confirmation.

Secretary must testify

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Judge John J. Sirica today ordered that Rose Mary Woods, President Nixon's personal secretary, be summoned to testify in the fact-finding hearing into the two phantom White House tape recordings.

Sirica, chief U.S. District Court judge, asked that Miss Woods be notified that she would be a witness after presidential aide Stephen V. Bull testified he saw her listening to tapes and typing at the same time.

"I would deduce it did have obviously something to do with the tapes," Bull said but added he did not know whether the secretary was making a transcript.

Bull testified that on Sept. 28 he was asked by Gen. Alexander Haig Jr., the President's chief of staff, to go to Camp David, Md., to assist the President in reviewing some tape recordings that had been subpoenaed by the special Watergate prosecution force.

Brother acquitted in mercy killing

By JOHN T. MCGOWAN
Associated Press Writer
FREEHOLD, N.J. (AP) — "The only crime Lester is guilty of was having his power to reason overwhelmed by events," Lester Zygmanski's attorney told a Superior Court jury before it acquitted the young man of slaying his paralyzed brother.

The jury of seven men and five women deliberated 2½ hours on Tuesday before acquitting Zygmanski, 23, on grounds of temporary insanity. He had been charged with first degree murder.

Zygmanski admitted killing his 28-year-old brother, George, with a shotgun blast last June as he lay in a hospital bed, paralyzed from the neck down as the result of a motorcycle accident.

The shooting was described by friends and relatives as a mercy killing.

"I feel relieved a little bit," Zygmanski said after the verdict. "I feel much better. That's all I want to say now."

In his closing arguments, defense attorney Robert Ansell pleaded with the jury to release Lester "not on pity, not on sympathy, but on the evidence."

Ansell said Lester was "crazed with love" for his brother when he shot him — "The only crime Lester is guilty of was having his power to reason overwhelmed by events."

Malcolm Carton, First Asst. Monmouth County Prosecutor, told the jury that the state had proved premeditated murder, and he asked the jurors to "do what's right ... do what's honest.... There is nothing in New Jersey law that says you can take the law into your own hands."

In his testimony, Lester admitted carrying a concealed sawed-off shotgun into the hospital and shooting his brother in the head. "I walked over and asked him if he was in pain," Lester told the jury. "He nodded he was. I asked, 'A lot of pain, George?' He nodded again."

"I went to him and I said, 'Well, I'm here today to end your pain. Is that all right with you?' He nodded yes, and the next I knew I had shot him."

Lucy on prisons and Watergate

NEENAH — Though Watergate is still on the minds of many young people at Armstrong High, it was obvious Monday afternoon that their concerns run the gamut from gun control to the energy crisis to taxes.

Gov. Patrick Lucey, speaking at Armstrong Monday, fielded a wide scope of questions from the student body. With only a brief opening statement on the merits of state government, Lucey answered questions for a good hour.

Though the students confronted the governor with questions on his stance regarding penal reform, tax relief and the fuel shortage, questions consistently returned to Watergate.

Asked whether he thought Nixon should resign, Lucey said it was the best thing the president could do. His response brought cheers, and a few boos, from the student audience. "The best interests of the country would be served by the resignation of the president," Lucey declared.

The governor stressed that long, drawn out impeachment proceedings would result in a "crippled presidency" during the next three years when there are crucial domestic and international issues to be dealt with.

Lucey also stated that he believed there was a "fair chance" that the president will resign, citing the pressure on him to do so coming from all fronts.

Questioned on the confirmation of vice president designate Gerald Ford, Lucey told students he believed Ford should be confirmed by Congress with due haste. In light of the possible resignation or impeachment of Nixon, Lucey said it was imperative that a Republican succeed him, instead of the Democrat Speaker of the House, Carl Albert.

Lucey was also asked to respond to a statement made by Gordon Strong before the Senate Watergate committee advising young people to avoid political life. Lucey called Strong's statement one of the "most touching" moments of the hearings. The governor, however, said he disagreed with Strong's statement. He said, "If idealistic young people refuse to participate in the political process, they will leave a permanent vacuum filled by those whose only interest will be self-interest."

The country's only salvation, Lucey said, is the involvement of young people. Watergate, he said, should cause them to resolve even stronger to "go in and clean things up."

Speaking to questions on the energy crisis, Lucey said that a fuel shortage this winter was "unavoidable."

Everyone, he said, is going to have to conserve, drive cars less and turn down the thermostats in schools and homes. The Alaskan pipeline, Lucey said, is three or four years away from being a reality. When it is operational, petroleum will be piped into the west coast while the real need is in the Midwest. Lucey said he had supported a trans-Canadian pipeline which would have brought petroleum into America's heartland.

Questioned on what he was doing to reduce the tax burden, Lucey stated that through his efforts and those of the state legislature, the new state budget should effect, in most places, an 11 per cent reduction in property taxes. The governor also cited revenue sharing as one of the greatest accomplishments of his term.

On the question of using a lottery to raise public revenue, Lucey said it was a totally irrational way of raising money. "It doesn't reflect the ability to pay," he added, but affects those with a tendency to gamble. Lucey said he will sign the bill to legalize bingo in the state, but added that was as far as the state should go with gambling.

Lucey was adamant in his response to a question on gun controls. He said he supported a bill which got nowhere in the state legislature which would stop the sale of "Saturday Night Specials." He called such weapons utterly useless for hunting and designed solely for killing a fellow human being at close range. He called the guns a "disgrace to this country."

Lucey also gave a heated response to a question on penal reform — why he advocated closing the Green Bay State Reformatory. He stressed he did not advocate its closing, but rather redistribution of its inmates to other prisons in the state that would allow for the closing of all but one cell block at the reformatory. "Contrary to the propaganda," Lucey said there had never been any proposal made to close prisons and turn inmates loose on the streets.

Major portion of Outagamie's budget goes toward education

BY DON CASTONIA

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Education normally is associated with school districts or with the vocational and technical schools. But Outagamie County is involved in education even though it no longer operates a county teachers college.

Projected costs under the education grouping for 1974 are $389,620. This is a drop of $106,000 from this year.

The decrease is the result of the state's eliminating the aid-to-common schools charge against the counties. This totaled $261,503 this year and will be paid by the state next year.

The largest single item under

Second of a six-part series

education now is the Plamann School for the handicapped. This is budgeted at $147,512 for 1974, an increase of about $28,000. Most of the increase is in the salary area where three aides have been added to the staff. About 75 per cent of the school's cost is funded through state aid.

The next largest item is the University Extension Service. Most people know this office as the county farm agent, but over the years the farm aspect has been expanded to include urban interests also. That budget is $83,443, an increase of $6,000. Salaries account for two-thirds of that increase.

Other accounts under education include the University of Wisconsin Center-Fox Valley, county aid to libraries, Cooperative Educational Service Agency, Highlands School in Appleton, the county fair and, next year only, the Alice in Dairyland contest.

The only one of those items showing a major increase is UWCFV, which is $11,000 to $14,450 for Outagamie's share. The campus is jointly operated with Winnebago County. Each county pays half of the building maintenance cost. A remodeling and air conditioning project is planned for next year.

Recreation is another grouping of budgets. For 1974 the proposed total is $6,479, a decrease of $4,000 from this year.

Included in this group are Plamann Park, Plamann Lake, Mosquito Hill

Park, the various access sites on the Wolf River and aid to Kaukauna for the Grignon Home. Operational budgets for those items are almost unchanged from this year.

The big difference is in development. The county had $62,000 budgeted for Plamann Park development this year and has nothing in the budget for next year.

The county has, however, committed itself to a three-year development project and funds either will have to be budgeted or committed from other sources, probably the money received from the state to settle up health center accounts. Park development is 50 per cent funded through the Land and Water Conservation Act.

Conservation and development is another grouping which has a relationship to recreation. This group of seven budgets totals $84,591 for 1974, an increase of $3,500.

Departments are soil conservation, county wardens, tree planting, rezoning, county advertising and promotion, county planner and the East-Central Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission.

Only the last two items show any change from this year. The county planner's budget is down $6,500, while the county's share of the regional planning budget is up $11,400.

Only the rezoning budget has any revenue to offset expenses. The revenue is from the filing fee charged people who want property rezoned.

Panel okays policy of permanent street paving

A policy requiring a permanent surface on city streets after four years to allow for the settling of underground utility work was approved unanimously by the Appleton Street and Sanitation Committee Monday.

If the recommendation isn't okayed by the City Council Wednesday, Ald. Edward Maloney (9th), who proposed it, said he would go ahead with his intention to get the question on a referendum ballot for April 2, 1974.

At the same time, Maloney dropped his intentions to get two other questions on a 1974 referendum ballot — should the city require sidewalks two years after a permanent street is installed and should it assess for sidewalk construction the same way it does for streets — because the committee is nearly ready to propose a sidewalk program to the city council.

In still another move Monday, as the committee continues to try to formulate clear and consistent street and sidewalk construction policies, the aldermen held up action on a request from property owners along Lehmann Lane, between Pine Street and the southern end, for asphalt paving without curb and gutter.

Despite the property owners' agreement to pay 100 per cent of the cost and waive all claims to payment should the pavement fail prematurely, the committee felt the move might set a dangerous precedent.

Maloney said granting the request would open up a floodgate of similar requests from elsewhere in the city. Public Works Director Robert Miller agreed that the city could be "opening the door" to requests from property owners along other streets where construction without curb and gutter would be bad, from an engineering standpoint.

Ald. Robert Safford (7th) felt the city should "not be so rigid" and urged granting the request if the property owners are willing to pay for it and accept all the risk of premature failure with the lack of curb and gutter to protect against early break up of the pavement.

Other aldermen argued, however, that allowing it here and elsewhere would saddle the city with heavy maintenance costs in the years ahead if the pavements started breaking up and could not be replaced immediately.

Safford said the people along Lehmann wanted to preserve their "nice setting," and were willing to pay for it. "I think it's right in this case," he said, adding that decisions on similar requests in the future could be taken one at a time.

Both Maloney and Thompson, whose wards include developing areas, protested the idea of building streets without curb and gutter.

Maloney countered the argument that the Lehmann Lane residents should get the exceptional pavement because they're willing to pay for it by noting that he knows "a guy who would pay for putting sidewalk in front of his home, if we just wouldn't put it in."

The committee held up a decision on Lehmann Lane until other decisions on future street policy are made.

Before approving Maloney's policy of requiring permanent surfaces on streets after four years, aldermen were told by City Engineer Thomas Harp that there are 25-30 miles of unpaved roadway in the city right now. Other aldermen agreed that it would take sizeable monies to catch up with such a policy.

LU students to conduct survey

A survey of public reaction to medical transplants will be conducted by 17 Lawrence University students this week. The survey will include questions to determine area migration patterns.

The pollsters are combining efforts to collect information for a course on medicine and society and a population studies course, both taught by Parker G. Marden, associate professor of sociology. Beginning Wednesday and running through Friday, they will visit approximately 150 households from 30 blocks selected at random in Appleton.

The survey framework was set up with the assistance of the National Opinion Research Center in Chicago, a non-political polling organization which studies social and academic concerns.

The Lawrence students will interview between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and will be carrying identification with an expiration date. The interview should take participants about 30 minutes to complete.

the requests from the administration. However, the 1974 budget preparation has worked in reverse as administrators basically computed the maximum the state would allow in increase and fashioned a budget with that in mind.

All 18 aldermen present voted for the tax levy, and in effect, the budget level, and all three town chairmen present did the same. Absent were Ald. Peter Beckley (10th) and Roylance Pointer (14th), and Harrison Chairman George Schwalbach. The 20 aldermen and four town chairmen make up the fiscal board.

The only formal school speaker besides school officials at the budget hearing was Walter Wieckert, of the Appleton Taxpayers Association, who challenged certain budget preparation techniques, including legalities of the document, and also called for the deletion of the one maintenance man proposed to be added in 1974.

Dr. Kenneth Johnston, director of administrative services, said he wasn't aware of preparation violations, but would provide the information needed. He also defended the need for the maintenance man, saying the schools were falling behind in maintenance because of staff shortages.

Wieckert also suggested that enrollment reductions could be used to justify staff reductions. A fiscal board member raised a similar question. Zieman discounted this, saying there are about 150 classrooms in the system, and if two students were lost per classroom that would mean a 300 student reduction, but actually would not allow a teacher reduction. Enrollment dropped half that this fall.

Zieman also noted that among the larger districts in the state, a survey showed that last year there was a 23.276 reduction in enrollment and a 402 increase in professional employees. Appleton's staff increased the equivalent of about 3.5 persons.

Mrs. McClanahan also said the board was forced by state law to add staff for its exceptional children programs.

Prompted by Mayor James Sutherland, Zieman also told the fiscal board that the 1973 school operating budget and tax levy would be affected adversely — and upward — by a series of outside events. Among these is a reduction in state aids, a change in the state law on aide determination and an anticipated reassessment of Outagamie County, all working to increase the burden on the local school tax payer.

The 1974 budget provides for about $284,000, instead of the current $268,000, for capital outlay for repairs and maintenance, an area neglected during recent years because of budget cuts. The area of instruction, including salaries, is up about $600,000 to $9.1 million.

In a separate action, the fiscal board elected Ald. William Errington (15th) as vice chairman of the board. Sutherland is chairman.

Rape hearing date expected

A preliminary hearing date was expected to be set this afternoon for a 24-year-old Kimberly man charged with the early morning rape of a girl Monday near a Town of Greenville supper club.

Robert E. Eisch, 1109 W. Fourth St., appeared Monday afternoon before Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2 where Schaefer lowered the defendant's bail from $10,000 to $5,000. Eisch had not posted bond by this noon.

The defendant's car was stopped in Appleton after it reportedly matched the one driven by the man believed to have raped the 17-year-old girl. She sustained facial injuries after being struck several times before being raped.

state statutes that the county was obligated to pay the bill. He said the statutes say the county is obligated to pay attorney fees in any suit brought against a county officer in the performance of his job and where he is not found guilty.

"But he was not found not guilty," Supv. Fred Rehfeldt said. "The case is still open."

Schuh said the reason for the dismissal of charges against Speener was immaterial. The fact remains, he said, that there was not any finding of guilt. "I feel the county is obligated to pay."

Supv. Eugene Higgins claimed that the charges against Speener stemmed from his personal actions and not as superintendent. He also questioned whether Schuh should have gotten involved at the beginning of the investigation. Schuh said he had no authority to become involved in a criminal action involving a county employee.

and paying it back with increased user charges in 1974. Conchlin said would "have a seriously disruptive effect" on plant planning and operation.

City officials were hoping that an exception would arrive from the Cost of Living Council before the end of August billing date, so that the increased rates could go on those bills and take effect beginning on July 1.

"We've already gone past the point where it will do us any good," Miller told the committee Monday, noting that November billings would reach the sewage plant operations account until after Jan. 1.

The deficit that the city hoped to pay out of increased user fee revenues, therefore, will have to be paid out of the general fund.

The user fee rate increase residents will start feeling in December will not be the last. Officials are already talking about an increase of up to 15 per cent some time next year, to offset increased operating costs.

represented the situations of Jacob's Bros. Market, 544 N. Lawe St., and Reneta Art Centre, 606 N. Lawe St. He said both stores were being seriously affected by the parking ban.

The committee noted that the meat market is located on a corner and customers can park on the other street but agreed that both businesses were being affected adversely.

Kalata told the committee that the "traffic on Lawe has not come up to the dire expectations" expected for it.

Kalata asked that the committee allow two 15-minute parking spaces in front of the stores. Letzkus noted that it made little difference if there were four cars parked for 15 minutes each or one car parked for an hour because the traffic could bottleneck when vehicles are turning left.

The possibility of allowing parking in the two-block area of the stores was also considered too dangerous.

The committee appeared to recognize the situation the stores were in but was unsure what action it could take as the no parking ordinance had already gone into effect. Committee members noted that it would probably take at least a few months before another ordinance could change the situation and by that time the stores may be "belly-up."

The committee decided to take no action until City Atty. David Geenen was contacted to discover what emergency action would be necessary and legal. The committee also resolved to conduct a traffic study to determine the traffic flow and safety on Lawe.

Two persons appeared to speak on the request for crossing guards on Memorial Drive and Prospect Street. Letzkus noted that each of the requests was put on a list like everything else.

He noted that each situation takes rapport with his staff." Kellogg believed that misstatement of facts in a job application is grounds for dismissal.

How much time Speener spends making personal telephone calls. Speener was charged with billing the county for personal, long distance telephone calls to Racine. The bills totalled about $500. Indications were Speener was diverting a lot of his duty time to telephone calls, Kellogg said.

About the loss of a large number of medical syringes from the Health Center. The Post-Crescent reported last June that the Health Center over-ordered 3,000 syringes, which later were returned to the company, and that at least 266 syringes apparently were stolen from locked cabinets.

Kellogg said the board wanted to know if Speener had permitted a person known to have illegal involvement with drugs to have access to the locked medical storage area.

More about the accidental death of a welfare patient at the Health Center last winter and other accidents which seriously injured two other patients. The death was not reported to the county welfare department, Kellogg said.

Why Speener moved ahead with plans to convert part of the Health Center to nursing home use without concurrence by the social services board. Speener had said he would proceed only with the concurrence of the social services board and the county board, Kellogg remarked.

If Speener knew when he purchased $1,800 worth of floor wax two years ago that the wax was unsuitable for Health Center floors. Speener had been charged with accepting a television set from Hyde Park Chemical Co. of New York in return for his order for the wax which was not used. He admitted receiving the television set during his John Doe testimony.

Why Speener spent $800 for a new snowmobile for the Health Center last April.

Higgins said his board has been unable to get answers from Speener or Health Center trustees on questions it started asking a year ago.

"We have people and money out there," Kellogg told Higgins in justifying the board's concern over Health Center matters.

About one-fourth of the 300 Health Center patients are welfare recipients, Kellogg said.

time and has to be studied or a hurried solution is often worse than no action at all.

In other action, a resolution to make a study of traffic hazards at the jog of Glendale Avenue and Oneida Street was referred to the traffic engineer.

Requests of $3,345 and $1,572 for supplies and materials for sign projects for the police department were approved.

which was initially made by Lawrence as an alternative to Miller's widening proposal, would be a good interim as well as final solution to the street's traffic-pedestrian tangle.

Miller said the boulevard would "lend itself" to abandonment in the future, and "may fit well with the university's future plans." He also noted that if the city decides in favor of using College as a major traffic thoroughfare, and scraps bypass plans, a boulevard would also be "very acceptable."

If the boulevard plan were included in the 1974 budget with Miller's estimated city cost of about $156,000, it would add about 28 cents to the tax rate. That, if other finance committee additions made to the budget last week are approved, would push the net city tax rate for 1974 about one per cent above the rate this year.

Some of that city cost could be offset by state funding, although that has yet to be fully explored.

If the city goes the boulevard route, Lawrence has also said it would landscape the median strip and surrounding terraces and maintain them in the future. That would also lower the cost to the city, Miller noted.

The Lawrence University plan called for a boulevard to run between Drew and Lawe streets, but Miller said today that one satisfactory for the city would have to run all the way east to Rankin Street.

A width for the boulevard is uncertain. Miller gave a range of between 62 and 72 feet Monday. The Lawrence plan called for a 61-foot total width, with a 13-foot median.

With the median, university and city officials believe lights at the intersections of Drew and Lawe streets would not have to be synchronized to permit easier crossing, because students could avoid traffic at the median strip.

Daanen, who did not witness the accident, ran to the scene.

Rennicke was taken to St. Vincent Hospital here by ambulance, where he was listed in critical condition until his death about 2 p.m. Monday. Yingling also was taken to the hospital, where he was treated for shock and released.

Brown County Coroner Timothy Blaney ruled the incident "definitely accidental," and said that no charges would be brought. There was no evidence of horseplay, he said.

Besides his parents, Rennicke is survived by two grandmothers, Mrs. Ed Rennicke and Mrs. Ina Keough, both Kaukauna; two brothers and a sister, all at home.

Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday at Bethany Lutheran Church, Kaukauna, with the Rev. Carl Aufderberg officiating. Burial will be in Trinity Lutheran Cemetery.

Friends may call at Fargo Funeral Home, Kaukauna, from 4 to 9 p.m. today and at the church after 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Use glamour stone for a paperweight

BY CAPPY DICK
Glamour stones are fun for boys and girls to make. They may be used for a variety of purposes—as bookends, paperweights and curios.

Each stone is covered with Cover it with cloth cloth of eye-catching color and design. This will call for some needlework in which advice and guidance from Mother or Grandmother can prove to be valuable.

Select smooth stones about four inches long and two inches thick. Wash and dry them to remove any sand or soil clinging to them.

Examine the contents of Mother's remnant box to select the pieces of cloth you believe will make the best coverings. The pattern of the cloth should be colorful, such as polka dots, bright plaids, brilliant stripes, and so on.

Cut the cloth to make the best fit for each stone, then sew the material snugly in place. When this has been done, the stone is ready for whatever use you intend for it.

Mothers, fathers, grandparents! If you are planning a party for the children and need new ideas to entertain them, you'll find 45 good ones in Cappy Dick's "Birthday Party Stunts" booklet. To get a copy, send 50 cents in coin and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Cappy Dick Booklets, P.O. Box 42877, Evergreen Park, Ill. 60642.

Tomorrow, how to win a rebound game, Cappy's newest prize!

Widest street: The widest street in the world is the Monumental Axis, running for 1 1/2 miles from the Municipal Plaza to the Plaza of the Three Powers in Brasilia, the capital of Brazil. The six-lane boulevard was opened in April, 1960, and is 273.4 yards wide.

The Bay Bridge Toll Plaza has 34 lanes (17 in each direction) serving San Francisco and Oakland.

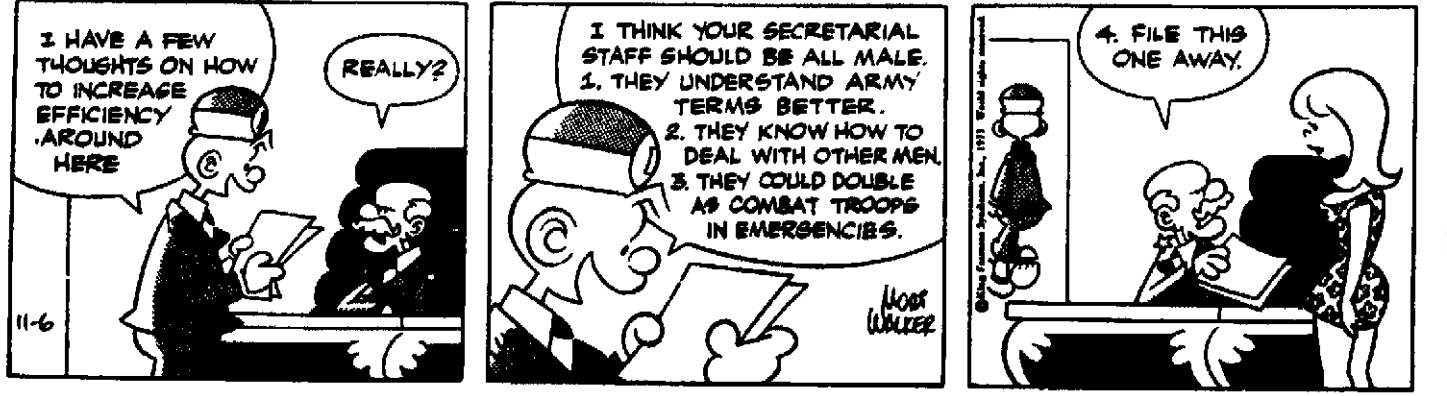

Biggest sweet tooth: The greatest consumers of refined sugar are the people of Iceland, with an average of 5.20 oz. per person per day in 1964-65. The lowest consumption is 0.70 oz. per day in Burundi in 1964-65.

Food packages should tell all

Since August, the package of bacon you buy is supposed to be designed in such a way that you can see a full, representative slice through the cellophane window—not just the deceptively “all meat” edges of the bacon. This is a new U.S. Dept. of Agriculture regulation and it culminates literally years of pulling and tugging between federal and state regulators, consumer protection agencies and bacon-makers. It may seem picaresque to you, but at today's prices for bacon surely the pocketbook aspects of this one thin slice of your “right to know” stand out clearly.

List curing agents
In addition, today's bacon package is supposed to list all curing agents used. Thus, if you are a nutritional purist or if you simply are among the millions who want to know just what you are eating, now at least you'll know.

Also, in recent months, the Connecticut legislature passed a breakthrough bill requiring all types of fresh and frozen meats to be packaged in transparent materials permitting you, the shopper, to see through at least 80 per cent of the top of the package and through at least 70 per cent of the bottom. (The other 10 per cent at the top is reserved for the label.)

The Connecticut legislation has aroused nationwide interest and could signal an important forward move in truth in packaging.

A lot is new in the sphere of meat labeling—and even more is in the offing of vital concern to you, the meat buyer. Specifically, here is news of which you should be aware: W

TV dinners must now contain at least three foods, one of them a substantial source of protein, according to a set of standards issued several months ago by the Food & Drug Administration covering the contents, and therefore the quality, of this type of frozen meal. The labels must accurately describe each of the three foods, in descending order of the weight of each. The amounts of each food, though, need not be listed.

Beginning Jan. 1, according to another FDA regulation, main dishes such as “chicken casserole” or “pepper steak” which have labels implying that the chicken or the pepper steak are included in the dish, must list all the actual ingredients. If the implied main ingredient is missing (sometimes it is) or if you are supposed to add that ingredient, the label must clearly state this fact.

Must report ‘imitation’
Also scheduled to go into effect in 1974 is an FDA regulation requiring food manufacturers to use the term “imitation” food if the food is a substitute for another food which it resembles and if it is nutritionally inferior to the “real thing.”

As of New Year's Day, 1974, the following new rules will apply to hot dogs: “Beef” hot dogs may contain beef only. Hot dogs made of other animals must be so labeled.

Foods labeled “frankfurter,” “bologna,” and the like, may contain only skeletal meat (the muscle part of beef). Up to 15 per cent poultry meat, water, sweeteners and curing agents are allowed too. Any binders such as cereals, nonfat dry milk or soy protein must be clearly listed on the labels—for instance, “franks, nonfat dry milk added.” The maximum for binders is 3.5 per cent.

Non-skeletal meat, such as tongues and internal organs, may be included if the term “with variety meats” or “with byproducts” appears on the label.

By December 1974, meats and other foods to which special vitamins and minerals have been added or which are claimed to have special nutritional “enriched” properties must carry labels telling their calorie content, amounts of proteins and amounts of key vitamins and minerals. The nutrients will be expressed in “RDA's”—or percentages of the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture's new system of “recommended Dietary Allowances,” for one average adult, for one day.

It's quite possible that some of the food manufacturers and packagers will beat the December '74 nutritional information deadline and that we'll start to see this information within a few months. At least two major meat packers already are labeling some products with nutritional information and at least one major food chain is nutritionally labeling other packaged foods.

The drive for nutritional labeling of all important food products is gaining strength. For the first time since the Truth in Packaging Act became law a full seven years ago, there is evidence of real progress on both food labeling and food standards.

State insurance fund reports year's dividend

MADISON — The unique and often debated, state-operated life insurance fund, comparatively small and unknown after 60 years, has reported another satisfactory year that resulted in a tidy dividend for its members.

The state insurance department, to which the legislature delegated its management in 1911 when the enterprise was authorized, says that the fund earned a new return on assets of 6.42 per cent last year and permitted an average dividend payment to policy holders of $14.81 per $1,000 of life insurance in force.

The little-known business enterprise of the state was launched to provide a yardstick for the practices and charges of private insurance underwriters and has survived numerous attacks upon it over the years by legislators who proposed to dismantle it as an improper activity for the state government. The fund has no publicity program, although it has sometimes been apparent that the news coverage of debates about its legitimacy have seemed to bring new applicants for contracts.

The fund reported at the end of the last year slightly more than $9 million in assets, 778 policies issued for the year for a total of 10,493 in force, about $61,000,000 in life policies in force and a net rate of earnings on assets of 6.42 per cent.

Stanley Du Rose, the state insurance commissioner whose duties include the supervision of the fund, said that the average size policy issued during the year was $6343 and that the average size policy in force at the end of the year was $5,624.

Du Rose said the fund has paid a dividend during each of the last four years.

The fund does not employ agents. Applicants apply directly to the office of the insurance department. All policy offerings are available to qualified applicants between the ages of 15 and 55 years.

The typical insured over the years has been a state civil servant or a near relative of a state employee.

Police & fire beat

Bonnie Haase, 1010 N. Union St., told police that she observed a person fire a pistol from a van truck ahead of her at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Prospect Avenue about 10:30 p.m. Monday.

Police said they received no other reports of injuries or damage resulting from any incidents in that area, but they did have information regarding the van's owner in case other reports were received.

Hit-run victim is identified tentatively

OSHKOSH — Tentative identification of the woman who was killed Sunday night south of here in a hit and run accident has been made and the alleged driver of the truck that struck her has been apprehended. The woman has been identified tentatively as Coco Quest, 27. She told a former Oshkosh employer that she was from San Diego, Calif., and had moved to the area a short time ago. However, officials today still were trying to make positive identification of the woman. Sheriff's detectives have identified the alleged driver of the truck as Clarence E. Cartwright, 52, 4080 Fond du Lac Road. He was taken to the sheriff's department for questioning Monday and was released pending further investigation. Cartwright has not been charged with an offense.

Winnebago County Coroner Duane I. Moore has been unavailable for comment on the woman's identification but said Monday her fingerprints were being sent to the crime information bureau in Washington, D.C., to attempt positive identification.

She was killed almost instantly when she was struck as she walked on the roadway of U.S. 45 about three miles south of Oshkosh.

The pickup truck that hit her continued without stopping, according to a witness.

East melodrama opens Thursday

It's melodrama time at Appleton High School-East starting Thursday, as the school will stage "Sweeney Todd the Barber" at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday in the school auditorium.

Jingo

The legend which provides the story for this good old fashioned meller dates back to the 14th century France when a certain barber was reputed to have cut throats and disposed of his victims in a highly unconventional manner.

The story reappeared during the first half of the 19th century when there was a revival of interest in things horrific and the setting was changed to late 18th century London. It was published as a serial in a series of sixpenny novels and a dramatic version was the feature of Queen Victoria's first command performance.

Brian J. Burton's 1962 version of the old horror comedy turned melodrama includes a number of comic songs and ballads in the Victorian manner. Melodramas of the period often included sentimental ballads sung by a female infant prodigy who played the part of a boy. East's production will follow that tradition.

Of course, a piano is a necessity not only for accompanying the songs, but also for underscoring various key moments, chase scenes and fights. Add the horrendous villainy of Sweeney and Mrs. Lovett and numerous asides directed to the audience and the sum total promises to be good entertainment for the theatergoer.

As the British press said upon reviewing the revival of "Sweeney Todd the Barber," "This is real theater, exciting and fast ... Brilliantly and inventively alive ... Plays hilariously!" Get in on the fun of experiencing a good old fashioned melodrama and see the East production of "Sweeney Todd the Barber."

LU Symphony at high school

Students from Appleton East and West high schools will have the opportunity to hear the Lawrence Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Joel Rosenberg, in a concert at Appleton West at 11 a.m. Thursday.

Music students from AHS-East will be transported to West by bus for the concert, arranged by Lawrence University in cooperation with the Appleton Public School system.

The concert will feature a performance of the Bruch Violin Concerto in G minor, Op. 26, with Eva Szekely, specialist in violin at Lawrence, playing the violin.

Also included on the program will be Beethoven's Symphony No. 5, and a Sonata for Brass by Gabrieli.

This is Conductor Rosenberg's first year at Lawrence. In addition to conducting the Lawrence Symphony Orchestra, he is an instructor of music in the faculty of the Lawrence Conservatory of Music. Rosenberg received his Bachelor of music degree in viola from Juilliard School of Music, New York City, and his master of music degree from the University of Utah, Salt Lake City. He has also studied viola at the Accademia Musicale Chigiana in Siena, Italy, and orchestral conducting at the Conservatory of Santa Cecilia in Rome, under a Fulbright Scholarship.

He has conducted band and chorus at a Salt Lake City high school, and he was conductor of the Youth Orchestra, Brass Ensemble and Percussion En-

Today in history

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 6, the 310th day of 1973. There are 55 days left in the year. Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1860, Abraham Lincoln was elected president. On this date: In 1782, George Washington was re-elected president. In 1913, the British arrested Indian nationalist Mahatma Gandhi. In 1917, New York state adopted suffrage for women. In 1936, Benito Mussolini prohibited all opposition parties in Italy. In 1938, Herbert Hoover defeated Alfred E. Smith in a hard-fought presidential election. In 1942, a tidal wave killed 10,000 persons in India. In 1962, the U.N. General Assembly called for economic sanctions against South Africa because of its racial policies.

Ten years ago: Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev claimed the United States gave in during a confrontation on the Autobahn to Berlin, possibly avoiding an outbreak of shooting. Five years ago: Richard M. Nixon defeated Hubert H. Humphrey in a presidential election. One year ago: Wage and price freezes were imposed in Britain to try to curb inflation. Today's birthdays: Novelist James Jones is 52. Former British Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart is 67. Thought for today: Never buy what you do not want because it is cheap. President Thomas Jefferson, 1743-1826.

Some disabled unaware of SS benefits

"Many people don't know that the Social Security Administration pays benefits to disabled persons and their families," according to Frank M. Donnick, manager of the Appleton Social Security office. He urges disabled persons or members of their families to visit or phone his office to inquire whether they are eligible for benefits. Payments are based on average earnings of the worker and the number of his dependents, Donnick said. Dependents may include children under 18 years, their mother, full-time students up to age 22 and those who have been disabled since childhood. Evidence of disability must be furnished, and the applicant should be prepared to tell when, where and by whom he has been treated for the disability. Donnick said that payments begin with the sixth full month that a person has been unable to work.

All-Fox Valley Association grid team

BY DAN VANDERKAS
Post-Crescent staff writer

Reed Giordana, who quarterbacked Kaukauna to a second place finish, was named "Offensive Player of the Year," and Scott Taylor, an interior lineman on the title-winning Appleton West squad, was chosen as "Defensive Player of the Year" by 10 sports reporters at a recent Fox Valley Association meeting.

Giordana, a 6-1, 175-pound senior, set three FVA individual records and tied a fourth during the season. The new marks include the most yards passing in a season (1,030), highest completion percentage (68 of 107 for 63.6 per cent) and most passes completed (68). He tied the record for most touchdown passes in a season with nine.

Appleton West allowed seven opponents a combined total of only 41 points—the lowest in the conference—and Taylor was one of the reasons for this defensive success.

Coach Paul Engen said Taylor was as good as anyone in the state. He was a quick, strong and aggressive 205-pounder and a sure tackler.

The sportswriters named 11 athletes to unanimous all-conference berths. Kaukauna's Frank Bourassa, a 6-3, 205-pound junior, was the only two-way unanimous choice. He was cited for his performances at offensive center and in the interior line on defense.

Ghosts' Coach Ken Roloff praised Frank for his excellent blocking all season, especially on passing situaoffense were Oshkosh North's Joe Sippl and Appleton West's Mike Vanselow (guards), and Kaukauna's Gregg Curry and Kimberly's Rick Uitenbroek (tackles).

Helf was chosen at offensive and defensive end, while Springer was a first team pick at linebacker and a unanimous choice at tackle.

The Terrors' Kurt Christensen edged out Kimberly's Randy Verbaten and the Indians' Potratz for first team specialist honors. Christensen received four votes, while Verbaten and Potratz garnered three apiece. The Ghosts' Scott Jensen was nominated but failed to receive a vote.

Other first team defensive laurels went to Oshkosh West's Tom Mugerauer and Menasha's Tim Rasmussen (ends), Chuck Beck, Oshkosh North, (interior line), Scott Weischoff, Appleton West, (linebacker), and Neenah's Mike Hanseter and Appleton East's Kevin Beaudou (defensive backs).

Besides the specialist category, close races existed in defensive end and offensive tackle balloting.

Mugerauer, Helf and Rasmussen all tallied three votes and were awarded first team berths along with Kangas.

Manawa's Steve Lowney, Gerry Nolan, Weyauwega, and Marion's Doug Arndt, Jordan Ellefson and Jon Aton earned All-Central Wisconsin Conference first team berths both on offense and defense, it was announced recently.

Lowney was a unanimous choice at runningback and earned first team honors at linebacker. Nolan was a unanimous pick at the offensive end spot and was also chosen at linebacker. Arndt made the squad at runningback and linebacker, while Ellefson got the nod at offensive center and defensive Guard Mike Levezow was the other Manawa athlete to gain first team recognition on offense. Defensively for the Wolves, end Stan Doman, interior lineman Mick Patri and halfbacks Rick Bonikowske and Dennis Thomack were the choices.

Little Chute defenders picked were interior lineman Dan (Hoss) Vanden at offensive tackle, while teammate Mark Krueger was the choice named at guard. Pete Kucksdorff captured defensive halfback honors.

For Weyauwega, tackle Mike Koplien and Steve Oehlke, a runningback, were named on offense.

Shiocton's Dennis Van Straten was the other player named given first team recognition on defense. He was picked in the interior line.

Nitschke has his 'night'

GREEN BAY — Ray Nitschke had his "day" in Lambeau Field last year. Monday he had his "night."

About 300 fans, friends and former teammates were on hand for the testimonial dinner at Riverside Ballroom.

It was yet another tribute to pro football's all-time greatest linebacker, and it was repeatedly punctuated by one admirer's insinuations: "Let's retire No. 66."

Several of Nitschke's former teammates who could not attend—Henry Jordan, Doug Hart, Bob Skoronski and Bart Starr—sent messages of congratulations, as did another ex-Packer, Charlie Brock.

Present-day Packers were conspicuous by their absence at the Nitschke fete.

Coach Devine was the only "immediate" team official to be on hand. None of the players showed up. Others representing the Packer organization who were there included Dominic Olejniczak, corporation president and Tony Canadeo, a member of the Packer executive board. Former Packers Ted Fritsch and Andy Uram also were present along with Ron Kostelnik and Dan Currie.

Umnus named Coach of Year

BY ROGER PITT
Post-Crescent staff writer

"One of the things we hoped to attain in the conference was respect. I feel this honor means we've attained that respect," Dave Umnus said, when informed he had been voted the Fox Valley Christian Conference's coach of the year.

Umnus collected 13 points in the balloting by FVCC sportswriters to outpoll Premontre's Ron Miller who gained six points and Menasha St. Mary's Avitus Ripp who gained five.

Umnus, who has been FVL coach for 13 seasons, had never received coach of the year honors despite accumulating a 62-47 record with the Foxes. His first 11 seasons were in the Midwest Prep Conference.

Fox Valley Lutheran posted a 5-3 record in the FVCC after being relegated to a low second division berth in the pre-season poll. The Foxes put together the best rushing attack in the league.

"I feel very honored," Umnus said. "I'm not sure just how to react."

The veteran mentor, who joined the FVL staff upon graduation from UW-LaCrosse, said, "It's difficult to say if this is the best team I've had. I can pick individuals who were as good as those we had this year and I can think of teams who played as well together."

Cornell Warner signs as Bucks backup center

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Cornell Warner, a 6-9 forward-center released last month by the Cleveland Cavaliers, was signed Monday by the Milwaukee Bucks of the National Basketball Association.

Center Dick Cunningham, who injured his left big toe in a lawn-mowing accident at his home Oct. 21, was placed on the injured list.

Warner, a three-year NBA veteran from Jackson State, spent two seasons with Buffalo and last season with Cleveland. He had a 6.8 career rebound average and a 5.9 scoring scoring

I can say, however, I enjoyed working with this group more than any in quite some time. We started together as sophomores and took our knocks for two years and finally put it together this year.

"I think our most-satisfying victory was over Roncalli. We enjoy homecoming games whether they are ours or somebody else's. We've only lost three homecoming games since I've been here," Umnus said. Because of the wide-spread Midwest Conference there were few rivalries in the league.

"I think the competition in the Fox Valley Christian Conference is much keener than the Midwest Prep. The schools are closer and this makes for good rivalries. The top teams in the Midwest Prep would do well here but there was a big spread between the top and bottom in that league which isn't the case here where you have upsets like Xavier over Premontre and Springs over St. Mary this year. That didn't happen in the Midwest Prep."

"We do get the athletes out," Umnus explained, as a reason for his success. "There is team unity and the student body is solidly behind us. The more I coach, the more I find talent isn't as important to winning as emotion is."

Sandy LeMoine crashed a 222-563 and Sherry Deeg a 538 in the AAL Women's at Super Bowl.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers, licking quarterback adversity with big offensive plays, a stubborn defense and a little good fortune, have widened their lead in the American Football Conference Central Division. Down to back-up quarterbacks Terry Hanratty and Joe Gilliam because of Terry Bradshaw's separated shoulder, the Steelers held off a late charge to defeat the Washington Redskins 21-16 Monday night in a nationally televised National Football League game. "We've got somebody up there taking care of us," quipped Steeler tackle Joe Greene, who recovered one Redskins' fumble and fell on two others by the Steelers.

Hanratty lasted only a half before aggravating a rib injury, but he staked the Steelers to a 14-6 lead on touchdown passes to Preston Pearson and Ron Shanklin. When the ailing Hanratty left the game early in the third quarter, the lead was in the hands of Gilliam, a second-year man who was on the Steelers' taxi squad last week. Steeler Coach Chuck Noll said Gilliam threw some good passes, some bad ones and some when he shouldn't have. "We wanted to move on the ground once we got the lead," Noll said, "but Joe's talent lies in his ability to throw the football. Gilliam fired a 46-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Barry Pearson six minutes into the fourth quarter to give the Steelers a 21-6 lead. But on the next series, Gilliam passed on second-and-12 at the Steeler 22 — a time when Noll felt he should have stayed on the ground — and Brig Owens made his second interception of the night. Six plays later, Billy Kilmer hit Larry Brown with a 17-yard touchdown pass to trim the Pittsburgh lead to 21-16. Washington got the ball with five minutes remaining, and a pass interference call against safety Glen Edwards gave the Redskins a first down on the Steeler 17. Kilmer then tossed a pass to Brown, who was hit hard by safety Mike Wagner. The ball popped out of Brown's hands, and into the arms of Edwards.

Edwards fumbled when he was hit on the same play, but Greene came up with the ball on the Steeler seven, and Pittsburgh ran out the clock for its 13th straight regular season win at home. "I thought we were going to pull it out," said Redskins Coach George Allen, his voice cracking. "Larry had the ball in one hand, but was intercepted." "Defense and the big plays on offense," Noll said in analyzing the victory. The loss dropped the Redskins, 5-3, into a tie with Dallas for first place in the National Conference Eastern Division. The Steelers, now 7-1, hold a 2½-game lead over Cleveland in the AFC Central.

Kimberly can use players after 2 games

KIMBERLY — Ray Hamann, superintendent of Kimberly Schools, was informed today that 10 basketball players who participated in a charity marathon basketball game would be eligible to play this season after missing two games. Originally, WIAA Executive Director John Roberts ruled the players ineligible until at least Nov. 30 when the organization's board of control was scheduled to meet. A telephone poll of board members set only a two-game suspension for the athletes. Kimberly notified the WIAA of the players participation in the charity game and also said it would appeal the ruling. Today's ruling means the players will be eligible for the Nov. 24 conference opener at Menasha. They will not be able to play in the opener Nov. 13 at New London, or, Nov. 16 with Green Bay West.

received five votes to go on the first team with Springer. Final statistics showed Schmid as the league's leading rusher with 709 yards in 175 carries. This total set a new FVA record for most yards gained on the ground by an individual in one season. Eccles was the second-leading runner (501 yards), while Potratz ended in third with 492. Newhouse was the top receiver with 34 catches (a league record for one season) for 511 yards (a new mark for most receiving yardage in a single campaign). Bill also established a new mark with eight receptions in one game. Appleton East's Paul Callaway was second in receiving with 18 catches for 215 yards.

Ritger seeks 13th PBA win

DETROIT (AP) — Dick Ritger of Hartford, Wis., goes after his 13th pro bowling victory here today after ending up as the top-seeded finalist in the $50,000 Canada Dry Open Bowling tourney. Ritger will have to wait as four other finalists battle among themselves to see who will meet him in the finals. Joining Ritger as the five top bowlers Monday were Jim Godman, Lorain, Ohio; Art Trask, Miami, Fla.; Tom Hudson, Akron, Ohio and Larry Laub, San Francisco, Calif. Ritger totaled 9,507 actual and bonus pins and has a 140-pin margin over Godman. He beat Trask 212-191 in a position round Monday to drop the Floridian into third place while Godman stumped Hudson 195-181. Ritger currently ranks third in this year's Pro Bowlers Association winnings with $43,433. He was fourth last week in the Painesville, Ohio, open and second in the Brunswick Eastern open two weeks ago in New York. In the first match tonight, Laub and Hudson will meet, the winner will face Trask, and so on.

John L. Paustian NOTES & NOTIONS

When O. J. Simpson was asked to describe the New Orleans defense that "held" him to 70 yards and blanked the Bills Sunday, he replied, "Hustle. That's what you call that defense." There's obviously still room for hustle in even such a highly sophisticated and high-salaried sport as pro football. But, unfortunately, the Green Bay Packers no longer seem to regard "hustle" as part of their approach to football. Also outmoded at Green Bay are "pride," "emotion" and "professionalism." I have no intention today of going into an in-depth analysis of the Packers' latest fiasco. In the first place, it's getting to be old stuff. And, secondly, all the public "zinging" the Packers have taken of late has failed to ignite them in the slightest.

It's a shame, though, to see the once-proud, once-effective defense go down the drain to join the offensive unit at the bottom of the sea. In the final 32 minutes Sunday, the Bears tore the Packers defense to shreds and had drained the Bears of their last ounce of resistance by the time the tying touchdown was scored. The Packers' inoffensive offense lived up to its easily-won reputation as the NFL's worst with 98 net yards, bringing the disgraceful total for three games to 224 yards—surely an all-time record for pro futility. The Green Bay passing "attack" has now mounted the overwhelming total of minus nine (-9) yards for two games.

It's doubtful if the Packers have ever played three successive games of such inept football. I certainly can't remember any similar span in the considerable time I've followed the Packers closely. The most common observation around Packerland is that "something is wrong." I'll go along with that generalization because it's pretty hard to evaluate all the rumors and speculation making the rounds. One can only hope that Head Coach Dan Devine hasn't "lost control" and that some methods of stemming the tide of deterioration remain.

In this, his third, year Devine has had a good chance to surround himself with "his kind of people." Obviously, "his people" are letting him down. . . . and, unfortunately, some seem to have waited until after the trading deadline to become sloppy and unaggressive.

The Giants (with six straight losses) are perhaps the only team that can challenge the Packers for the "NFL's worst" label currently. Even Houston scrounged up enough points finally to win a game. The Packers, though, could take heart from the examples of five "turn-around" teams who are showing that it can be done. Atlanta, after three touchdown-less games and "can the coach" campaigns, have fired back to win four straight. New Orleans, once considered the NFL's No. 1 patsy, has stormed back for 4-out-of-5. The Bears, the Lions and the Eagles have all won two in a row after horrendous slumps.

One wonders if Green Bay will prove to be the only place where it's impossible to inspire or goad players into new habits.

Devine not giving up

BY LEE REMMEL
GREEN BAY — Some of the alleged Packers' faithful already are wearing black "G" arm bands.

Other loyalists were observed leaving Lambeau Field 10 minutes before Sunday's 31-17 bruising by the Bears had ended.

The question, therefore, was inevitable. Did he, Coach Dan Devine was asked Monday, feel like he was, on the Titanic?

After pausing to ponder this poser, spawned by three disastrous losses in succession, Devine's darkly handsome features crinkled into an elfin smile.

"At what point of the voyage?" he rejoined. "Have we struck the iceberg? There were a lot of bands playing when it left the shore."

It was safe to conclude, then that he was not giving up the ship?

"Over my dead body, we're giving up the ship," Devine declared.

Record review
But, following a record, five-hour long film review of Sunday's game, he admitted that righting the listing vessel will be no simple matter.

"There isn't much you can do in personnel as far as making changes is considered. There are some players we get a good, consistent game from each week. There's not much you can do in changing personnel. The statement I made in that regard was made in a post-game situation and a lot of things are said at a time like that."

"In a situation like ours, of course, you have the emotional fatigue that sets in at this time, which you have to fight. The constant second guessing and the turmoil we went through last week doesn't make it any easier."

"That's why you work your butt off not to lose, because it's part of losing. In our meeting tomorrow, the answers will be right there. The people who are responsible are right there and the people responsible for bouncing back are right there in that room. You aren't going to get any more. It's about as plain as I can put it."

"This situation is something I've worked 25 years to avoid. And, I'll tell you what, I'd just as soon go another 25 years before it happens again."

"But somehow, some way, we're going to come out of this, and it's never going to happen again. You can put that down in your facts book."

There was one note of cheer in the pervasive gloom.

"Everybody's available for Sunday's game with the Cardinals," Devine said. "We have no new injuries. I don't know about Jim Del Gaizo, though. I don't know whether his shoulder is recovered to a point where he'll be ready to play."

"It's part of the game, I might add, to play over injuries. I'm hurt, too, very deeply. My family and myself are hurt very deeply. But you can't let personal feelings interfere."

Devine surprised by delivering himself of a highly optimistic prediction at this point.

"We've got some good people on this team," he asserted, "and they're going to win a championship—the big one. I've made very few predictions in my life, but every major one I've been has come true."

Did his players know this?

"Maybe I'll tell them," he said with a smile. "I think they know it, though."

Over-reactors
"You know, on every football team, you have over-reactors and under-reactors. You have some people feeling too bad, like Larry Krause, who played as well as anybody Sunday."

"Going through the dressing room after the game, you can see Larry sitting there so emotionally upset. But if any guy who had a right not to be sorry about his play, it was Larry Krause."

"It's just like any other group of 47 people. You have some who don't take it hard enough. But getting down on yourself is not the answer. Realizing you are not playing well is part of it, however."

How many over-reactors do the Packers have?

"I don't know how many we have, but this is an ever better time than last week to find out."

Black armbands take place of bumperstickers

BY MIKE O'BRIEN
Associated Press Sports Writer
GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Those bumper stickers proclaiming "The Pack is Back" are out.

Armbands are in—black armbands, with a capital "G" inscribed on their sides. They were in evidence in coffee shops and watering spots around what used to be called "Tittletown, U.S.A.," Monday after the Green Bay Packers' third successive onedead defeat, 31-17 to the Chicago Bears Sunday.

"We could have sold a whole bunch of them if we had had them to sell," said Beverly Heim, an armband-selling waitress at a restaurant and souvenir shop.

"There are a lot of wolves coming out. It's a small town and it's rough," said linebacker Jim Carter, captain of the Packers defense which the Bears had shredded for 337 yards, 218 of them by quarterback Bobby Douglass.

Carter and his teammates, interviewed Monday, professed to have no simple explanation for the Packers' collapse. If they had, they weren't saying.

"They say it's great to be a winner in this town, but it's easy to be a winner," Carter said. "Losing is the test of what kind of man you are, what you do to pull yourself together and come out of it. So far we haven't shown enough of that and that includes me."

A haggard Coach Dan Devine spent five hours studying the horror films and started his weekly news conference more than 90 minutes later than usual.

"We're sitting in a position where the worst thing you can do is panic," Devine said.

"This constant second guessing and turmoil that we've gone through last week didn't help us . . . prepare for Sunday's game, but this is what happens when you lose," Devine said, referring to Green Bay's impatient fans.

Carter said he couldn't "fault the defensive game plan."

"We practiced how Douglass runs that offense but we just didn't execute. Maybe we could have had more variations, but that's hindsight," Carter said. "Maybe we were too cautious, wondering too much whether Douglass was going to run with the ball or pitch it. But there was no confusion out there. We just weren't executing."

Quarterback Scott Hunter, sporting ugly bruises above and beneath his right eye, had received the brunt of the booing while completing only three of 14 passes.

"We've just got to go day by day, play by play," Hunter said. "I don't know what our mathematical possibilities are for the playoffs, but if we want a good year next year, we've got to straighten out now and finish up strong."

Cornerback Ken Ellis, playing out his option and by his own admission having less than a good year, said one problem was that the Bears and other teams have improved. He also pointed to the relative inexperience of the left side of Green Bay's defense.

"I'm not saying we haven't improved ourselves but Dave Robinson is not here at linebacker anymore, for instance," Ellis said.

"I'm not saying anything against Tom MacLean," he said. "He's a good football player but he's a rookie. We have two rookies playing on that side. I think Douglass made a statement to the effect he wasn't picking on that side but it's kind of hard to stay away from it. I'm sure every team we play now has a game plan to pick on that side."

Ellis, who plays on the other side, said it was hard to compensate for inexperience on the left.

"You can't really do that. If you try to help others before you do your own job, the defense breaks down. You've got to take care of your responsibilities first."

Ellis said morale did not seem a significant problem.

"We've had great practice sessions even though we're losing," he said. "I know I haven't played well at all. I made some big plays last year. I've made a couple this year but not consistently. I don't know what the answer is."

"We definitely have a lot of talent—that's why no one can figure out what's happening," Ellis said. "Of course, the longer the defense is on the field, they're going to move the ball on you. You tend to get tired and the other team has professionals, too. They're going to move the ball if they get enough chances."

Receiver Jon Staggers had another theory.

"I think you get to a point where you try too hard," Staggers said. "When you press, you're not relaxed and you can't do what you do best. I'm not saying this is happening, but it could be. Certainly, everyone here wants to do well."

'Alien' NFL kickers rap critics

NEW YORK (AP) — Lanarca, Cyprus, Opole, Poland, Petronelli, Austria, Budapest, Hungary, Oslo, Norway, Bushey, England, Youngwood, Pa. Roll call at the United Nations? Nope. Roll call in the National Football League. It is, as some critics have said, the invasion of "aliens and old men" who have turned 1973's Year of the Runner into 1973's Year of the Kicker.

Of the 26 first-string extrapoint and field-goal specialists in the league, 10 are imports: Miami's Garo Yepremian from Lanarca, Green Bay's Chester Marcol from Opole, Dallas' Toni Fritsch from Petronelli, the New York Giants' Pete Gogolak from Budapest, Kansas City's Jan Stenerud from Oslo, the New York Jets' Bobby Howfield from Bushey, plus Cincinnati's Horst Muhlmann of Dortmund, West Germany; Pittsburgh's Roy Gerela of Sarrair, Alb., Canada; San Diego's Raimund Werschling of Mondsee, Austria; and Atlanta's Nick Mike-Mayer of Bologna, Italy.

But have the kickers taken over? Hardly.

Last year there were 817 field-goal attempts and 499 made. At the halfway mark this season there were 435 attempts and 279 made. Project that through the 14-week season and there will be 870 attempts, about 4.7 tries per game, barely up from 1972's 4.4 per game average.

There's a bit of bitterness from imports reacting to the complaint that foreigners have "taken over" an American sport.

"Who's a foreigner?" says the outspoken Yepremian. "I'm an American citizen, I've served five years in the Army. I resent this 'foreigner' business. 'Where did football come from? For that matter, where did baseball, the national pastime, come from? Foreigners? Where was Roberto Clemente born? What about Jesus Alou? Or Bert Campaneris? Or Bert Blyleven?"

Football, it turns out, is foreign, an Americanized version of Britain's rugby which, in turn, has its roots in similar sports going back to the ancient Greeks and Romans. Baseball? It's a derivative of England's rounders. But the idea of hitting a ball around with a stick started 5,000 years ago as a religious rite in Egypt.

The late Roberto Clemente, one of baseball's greatest stars, was born in Puerto Rico. Alou is from the Dominican Republic. Campaneris is Cuban. Blyleven was born in The Netherlands. Yepremian has made his point well.

"Listen," he says with an air of finality, "a kicker's a kicker no matter where he's born. And anybody here who calls me a foreigner is a foreigner himself — unless he's an American Indian!"

Fritsch says he doesn't feel any resentment — at least not from fans or critics. He's taken some razzing, though, from players on other teams. If that has any effect, though, it's the positive kind. "Every time I am on the field I say, 'I am the best.'"

Svare vacates field for peace in office

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The short, unhappy reign of Harland Svare is over. The husky, former linebacker resigned as coach of the San Diego Chargers Monday and resumed the general manager's job he held before taking over coaching duties from Sid Gillman with four games to play in 1971.

Ron Waller, a former Los Angeles Rams' running star who has been the Chargers' special teams coach since 1972, was named coach by owner Eugene V. Klein for the rest of the National Football League season. Klein said he'd name a new coach next year.

Svare, 43, the target of heated abuse by the home fans all season, appeared relieved as he made the announcement at a sportswriters' luncheon.

"The losses have been very hard on me, hard on my pride and my dignity," he said. "I haven't shown my emotions. I've kept it inside."

"It was my decision. I think I'll find my general manager's chair very comfortable. At least now I won't have to explain why we turned the ball over."

The Chargers were beaten 190 by the Kansas City Chiefs Sunday, their third shutout this season. They are 1-6-1 this year after a 4-9-1 record and their only last-place finish in 1972.

The fans hung "Sack Svare" banners from the railings, booed a hurried mention of "the Charger coaching staff" at the pregame introductions, and watched as a group pelted Svare with wads of paper as he strode off the field.

Badgers lead 1st hockey poll

HANCOCK, Mich. (AP) — Wisconsin collected nine of 10 first place votes from collegiate coaches throughout the country and ranks first in this week's national hockey poll.

The Badgers, defending National Collegiate Athletic Association champions, beat Minnesota 3-2 and 8-2 over the weekend as they opened their season.

The other first place vote went to Cornell, which is idle for several more weeks.

Radio station WMPL in Hancock conducts the poll, with coaches from the nation's top three collegiate hockey leagues voting weekly.

Here is the top 10 with win-loss records, first place votes, and total points based on a 10-98-7 etc. formula:

1. Wisconsin, 2-0, 9, 99

head high, at the end of the game.

Klein, who refused to give Svare a vote of confidence two weeks ago, praised him as "a remarkable judge of talent," but added, "He wasn't getting it (winning) done."

Svare, linebacker on three conference champion New York Giant teams in the 1950s, coached the Los Angeles Rams from 1962 to 1965, spent a year as a stockbroker, then became an assistant coach with several clubs before joining the Chargers as general manager in 1971.

Waller, who played for the Rams from 1955 to 1958, became the first player ever drafted by the Chargers after turning down an offer to buy the new franchise in 1960. But his comeback attempt was thwarted by a knee injury.

After several years he wound up coaching in the Continental League and won three straight championships before joining the Chargers as assistant in charge of kick and kick-return teams.

Waller said he took the job "strictly on an interim basis." He said he planned a more freewheeling attack, and would deactivate the injured Unitas in favor of third-year quarterback Wayne Clark, who is to compete with rookie Dan Fouts for the starting job.

Weather forecast

Rain, showers and snow flurries are forecast Tuesday for the Dakotas and northern and western Plains. Showers are expected for most of the Pacific coast. Warm weather is forecast for the Southeast and colder weather elsewhere. (AP Wirephoto map)

Slight warming expected

A slight warming condition is expected for Wednesday to help ward off the chilly conditions brought on by a flow of Arctic air which sent overnight lows to 7 degrees at Spooner.

Tonight should be mostly fair and continued rather cold with the low around 20. Wednesday will be increasingly cloudy and warmer with a high in the low 40s.

Light and variable winds tonight will become southeasterly at 7 to 15 miles per hour Wednesday.

Thursday should be partly cloudy and continued cold, according to the U.S. Weather Service in Green Bay.

The Wisconsin Michigan Power Co. reported a high of 31 was recorded in the Appleton area and the low dipped to 15. No precipitation was reported.

At midmorning, the barometer was steady at 30.43 and the winds were westerly at 12. Relative humidity was 72 per cent and the dew point was 16 degrees.

Sunset today at 4:37 p.m. Sunrise tomorrow at 6:38 a.m. Moonset tomorrow at 3:12 a.m. Full Moon on Nov. 10.

The planet Mars has now moved back from the constellation Aries into Pisces. Near the end of this month, Mars will resume moving eastward among the stars and in December the ruddy planet will again be in Aries.

Let's wrap up Watergate

So the Watergate is on again with Ohio Sen. William Saxbe nominated to be President Nixon's fourth attorney general and with Leon Jaworski to replace the fired Archibald Cox as special prosecutor.

The Senate should act promptly on the Saxbe nomination. And its hearings on the nomination should be used to nail down for the American people exactly how Saxbe intends to proceed with the investigation and exactly what freedom of action Jaworski will have. Watergate has stretched out too long, and the firing of Cox, the resignation of Elliot Richardson as attorney general and the pointless court contest over White House tapes which might be helpful to the investigation was a needless delay. There must not be a repetition.

The nomination of the outspoken Saxbe was a surprise because of some of the blunt things he has had to say about President Nixon. And Saxbe had announced he did not intend to seek re-election next year, saying he had had enough of Washington. But he says he is eager to become attorney general.

As in nominating Rep. Gerald Ford to be vice president, Mr. Nixon's choice of Saxbe in large part may have been dictated by selecting someone who is well-known in Congress. That will make confirmation more certain.

Saxbe takes on no simple assignment in rebuilding the Justice Department and the public's faith in it. Department morale is sagging from, first, a public conclusion that the Watergate investigation had been so bungled that a special prosecutor was needed and, then, from frustrations resulting from the firing of Cox and the resignation of Richardson.

Jaworski comes to his job with good credentials, including being a past president of the American Bar Association and counsel to the Warren Commission which investigated the assassination of President Kennedy.

Jaworski says he has taken the job with an understanding he will have full cooperation of the administration, including access to presidential documents if need be.

But the nation has heard that before. Jaworski's freedom of action is one thing which must be clearly established at the Saxbe confirmation hearings. The President has promised that Jaworski will not be fired without the agreement of the leadership of both parties in Congress and top members of both parties on the Senate and House Judiciary Committees.

That sounds pretty good. Such an understanding could prevent the delay which will result if Congress proceeds with the idea for Federal Judge John Sirica to name a special prosecutor.

All these points should be established beyond any doubts when the Saxbe nomination is considered in the Senate. The investigation must have the freedom to go wherever it leads and, as the President has said, convict the guilty and clear the innocent.

Judges vs. judges on boats

One of the more intriguing issues litigated in the courts of Wisconsin lately involved a respected and learned trial court judge, in his capacity as private citizen, carrying up to the state supreme court a tax issue that involves something slightly more than a dollar a year for the magistrate as appellant.

The archives of the Wisconsin supreme court will contain for the edification of future generations of students and lawyers the story of Willmarth L. Jackman, who protested as invalid the license charge of $3.25 for a period of three years imposed by state law upon him as a condition for the legal operation of his pleasure boat.

Mr. Jackman, as it happens, is a respected and experienced circuit court judge in Madison, where he uses his boat on the lakes that are among the most valued of the scenic resources of the neighborhood. He was ticketed by Madison police, the record shows, for having failed to register his boat as required by state law, and for failing to pay the small registration fee required. Mr. Jackman invited prosecution deliberately. As a lawyer he had become convinced that such a tax, as he regarded it, was invalid under the Northwest Ordinance of 1787 which asserted that the waters of Wisconsin and other future states carved out of the Northwest Territory, as later did the state constitution of Wisconsin, should be "forever free." Any public tax on the use of such navigable waters, Judge Jackman insisted, must be invalid.

Defendant Jackman was tried in the Dane County circuit court. His brother judges excused themselves and called in for reserve duty on the bench one of the prestigious men of the Wisconsin judiciary. Acting Circuit Judge George R. Currie, retired as chief justice of the state supreme court, listened, read the briefs, pondered, and ruled that the boat license charge is legal under the police power of the state since the revenues derived therefrom are dedicated to boating safety programs, among other purposes.

Judge Jackman appealed to the state supreme court, where he became Appellant Jackman, and the seven justices listened with due deference to his case and that of the state prosecutor, deliberated in chambers, and after a suitable time for study and presumably some discussion, joined Chief Justice Hallows in ruling that the trial judge was right and that the charge of the state for the licensing of boats is not a transgression of the right of "free" navigation.

Without much doubt, this episode will be pondered by future generations of aspiring law students. It is a mildly entertaining tale. But it may have a value quite different than the lawyers and judges assumed. It is a somewhat spectacular reminder, in a time of pressing concern about tax equity, of the absurdly low levy on boats as property as distinguished from most other forms of property. The $3.25 license payment covers three years. It replaces the former rule that boats were taxable as property. When there are some 330,000 boats licensed, many of them of high value, that must rank as the most generous tax break the legislature of Wisconsin was ever persuaded to authorize.

John Wyngaard

Idea of public lotteries won't die

MADISON — If an ambitious politician could be sure he could gather in all the votes of those who believe public lotteries can resolve the burdensome problem of taxes, he would be a formidable candidate indeed.

No illusion about public affairs has attracted more believers than the notion that is contained in the familiar assertion that it is in the nature of the human species to gamble and that if only governments would tax the gamblers who cannot be dissuaded from their craving there would follow a substantial reduction in the tax burden of the more enlightened — or more virtuous — elements of the state or local community.

Thus the other day Milwaukee aldermen with a heavy vote adopted a resolution proposing to put on the city ballot in the spring for an "advisory" vote the question of sponsoring lotteries for public revenue.

Used for schools
The proceeds, they asserted confidently, would be put to a clearly benevolent public purpose, namely, the schools that are consuming general tax money at a pace that is burdensome for local taxpayers as well as those who pay to the state for the increasingly higher subsidies required by educators beyond property levies.

As it happened, Mayor Henry Maier promptly responded with a resounding veto and the assertion that such taxing of the weak, or the ignorant, for such an essential and wholesome public purpose as the education of the young people of his community is unworthy.

No doubt he is right. It is doubtful that any mayor who has a decent respect for his place in the history of his times would entertain such a notion seriously. Maier may share the conviction of this correspondent that the grandiose claims of the revenue potential of publicly taxed lotteries, or publicly operated lotteries, are obviously false, aside from the question of taxing the poor and the gullible for vital public services.

One wonders, nevertheless, about the persistence of the conviction that lotteries are painless and sure ways to finance governmental services. The reason, it must be supposed, is that the complexities of public finance are great and that the understanding of the mountainous cost of government today is not as extensive as democratic philosophers might wish.

The stories are told about tens of millions, or $50 million, or even $100 million yielded up in some other states that have surrendered to the sure of the eternal desire of a predictable fraction of the public to buy lottery tickets, or bingo tickets, or whatever. Yet such sums are negligible with respect to the enormous costs of public budgets today. If this state conducted a lottery twice a month at the usual charge for admission, the net receipts probably would not equal the yield of the state cigarette tax, as an illustration.

Yet the absurdly exaggerated belief of riches to be had for the state treasury is not as puzzling as the indifference of otherwise intelligent and responsible citizens to the reality that any public lottery is a tax upon the poor and the ignorant.

When the long dispute about the bingo enabling act was ended in the Assembly a fortnight ago, a comparatively few opponents (who deserve some credit for their fortitude under the circumstances) warned that the precedent would inevitably breed other gambling propositions.

It is suggestive, at the least, that the eager if unsophisticated financiers of the Milwaukee City Council brought in their plan for a referendum on a full-scale public lottery within days after the approval of the bingo act. They may yet summon the votes required to defy Maier's veto.

"YOU'RE ABSOLUTELY RIGHT, BILL... WE'LL GET RID OF THE PIANO!"

New Israel is emerging

TEL AVIV — A new Israel is emerging from the shock of the most recent round of fighting in the Near East. Its character is not yet fully clear, but enough is known to throw grave doubts on the theory that chances for a permanent settlement, or even a very long truce, are good.

The most striking feature of the new Israel is the attitude toward the military. The defense forces were once considered to be Israel's miracle. Generals, and especially Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, were the supreme heroes. Borders were maintained against Egypt and Syria with forces numbering about one-fifteenth the size of the enemy armies.

Now everybody understands that the Israeli soldiers are not miracle workers. At the very least it is acknowledged that Israeli forces sustained so many casualties in the first phase of the recent fighting it was impossible to mount decisive counterattacks against Egypt and Syria.

New military hero
Gen. Dayan is being blamed — and blames himself — for at least some of the casualties. The new military hero — Gen. Ariel Sharon who forced the crossing of the Suez Canal into Egyptian territory — questions many different features of the last campaign.

One universal conclusion is that a larger standing force is necessary. Gen. Sharon believes that Israel will have to stay in a state of readiness for months and years to come. So does Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir, and he is already beginning to raise the money for the job.

The need to support a larger force promotes a second change — a change in national self-image. After the six-day war gave Israel what were believed to be comfortable borders, many Israelis went out to lose their reputation as mere fighters. There was a particular effort to foster the elements of modern-style good living — stylish boutiques, fancy restaurants, resort hotels.

Now the era of belt-tightening has come round with a vengeance. Finance Minister Sapir has slapped a 7 per cent surtax on income taxes. Public services are being cut and hours of work raised. Nobody even noticed the other day when gasoline prices were raised by 50 per cent. "Our ideal life style," one Israeli put it, "is being changed overnight from Monaco to Sparta."

Most important of all, perhaps, is the change in attitude toward the Arabs. In the past the tendency was to smile at Arab threats while believing that it would be possible to work out peace through joint efforts in practical projects. In that spirit Gen. Dayan pushed his program for Israeli settlements on Arab territories while fostering at the same time opportunities for Arabs within Israel.

Discount talk of peace
Now that view has been shattered. The Israelis take the Arabs seriously as fighters. By the same token, they now tend to discount any Arab talk of peace. The leading Israeli Arabist, Yehoshafat Harkavi, believes that Egyptian talk of "Palestinian self-determination" is a code word for the withering away of Israel. Some Israelis actually believe the Egyptian and Syrian forces set out to annihilate Israel on the attack last month.

Perhaps these fears will soon be assuaged. Maybe they will be overcome by a sense of isolation in the world. But I doubt it.

My impression is that the Israelis do not regard the present situation as stable. Indeed, one general told me the right word was not ceasefire but intermission. As to President Nixon's claim that the Near East is now closer to peace than at any time in the past 20 years, one Israeli minister said: "That just shows the depths of his pessimism over the past 20 years."

Looking back Republicans triumph in state vote

Appleton Post, Nov. 7, 1873.

C. C. Washburn elected governor by over 5,000 majority — As might be expected at the present time of writing, the returns from the State and County are so meagre that only approximate estimates are to be made. We have figures enough at hand, however, to warrant our saying that the entire Republican State Ticket is elected, by majorities ranging from five to eight thousand. If it turns out that the official canvass corroborates these preliminary returns, Republicans will have been even more successful than they had even hoped to be.

In our own county — Outagamie — the indications are that the Democratic State Ticket has received its usual majority. Prospects are, however, that our own candidate, Mr. G. A. Alexander, is elected by a small (GOP) majority. The contest for Register of Deeds was lively and spirited.

Maj. Richmond, having no opponent, received the unanimous vote of the 1st District for Member of Assembly.

25 YEARS AGO
Tuesday, Nov. 2, 1948.

Mrs. A. C. Mulder won first prize in the hat making contest at the Appleton Homemakers Club meeting. Other prizewinners whose artistic creations included salad bowls, egg beaters, teakettles, copper cleaning wire and cookie cutters were Mrs. Henry Jahnke, Mrs. Walter Hannemann and Mrs. James Kools.

Four lettermen were returning to the Appleton High School basketball squad that season, Jack Fielkow, center and forward; Jim McGee, forward; Tom Cooper, team captain and a guard, and Fran Dasher, forward.

Arnold J. Cane and Frank Drew Hollenbeck were named Grant Books leaders for the Twin Cities study group meeting at the Elisha D. Smith Library.

10 YEARS AGO
Tuesday, Nov. 3, 1923.

R. G. Ison, Neenah, was elected a member of the executive committee of the pulp and paper section of the National Safety Council. Ison was manager of safety services at Kimberly Clark Corp.

Kenneth E. Pribe, former state assemblyman from Appleton, was the chief clerk of the Wisconsin Assembly.

Miss Jane Rietzen, Little Chute, won the state championship in the Mink-K-Yourself-with-Weed contest. Her entry was a white wool wedding gown, which was to go to the national contest in Albuquerque, N. Mex. Her twin sister, Jacqueline, was a national contestant the previous year and the year before that.

Opposes ordinance on beer sale hours

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

There is an ordinance coming before the council prohibiting the sale of beer between the hours of nine at night and eight in the morning by all retail establishments other than taverns.

Proponents of this ordinance, (Liquor Dealers) claim as its purpose uniformity in selling hours. They are forbidden to sell liquor after nine by state law.

It passed the council as a resolution by a 19 to 1 vote. The liquor dealers convinced the council members that this legislation was needed largely on the basis that sales of beer to trouble makers, drunks, the accident prone, and rowdies were made primarily by grocery stores after nine o'clock. Also, since some of the surrounding municipalities forbid beer sales after nine, it causes people who have been drinking to drive to Appleton, creating traffic problems.

Actually: It does not provide uniformity because it doesn't affect taverns nor any place outside the city limits.

It is unreasonable that only desirable people purchase beer before nine and undesirable after. Retailers cannot police morality. If a person is 18 or over and not apparently intoxicated there is no reason to refuse to sell him beer. It would be ridiculous to say, "Sorry you can't have this because I think you might give it to a minor or get too drunk on it."

Since some of the surrounding localities permit sales of beer after nine, it is possible that we are merely forcing more people to drive a greater distance, worsening rather than helping the traffic problem.

This ordinance will possibly be voted on by the council Wednesday, November 7. If passed it becomes law. Since the aldermen represent the public rather than just the liquor dealers, I urge that people let their wishes be known by calling their respective alderman. Also there are petitions at most local supermarkets to be signed.

Drivers liberated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commuters are changing their spots, says The Road Information Program. Millions of metropolitan workers now drive to work and back without entering the central city.

By 1965, suburb-to-suburb travel will represent more than half of the work trips near our cities, according to the nonprofit research and information agency.

TRIP says the nation's capital is a good example of suburb liberation. Here, 41 per cent of all Washington-area commuters never enter the city, compared with 30 per cent 10 years ago.

The wit of the Greeks

A distinguished news correspondent who recently visited the Greek community of Baltimore, where Spiro Agnew began his career, relates that an old ethnic proverb is heard everywhere in the precincts where the former vice president grew up.

As he quoted it, the folk aphorism goes:

"Do you know how to steal?"

"Yes."

"Do you know how to hide?"

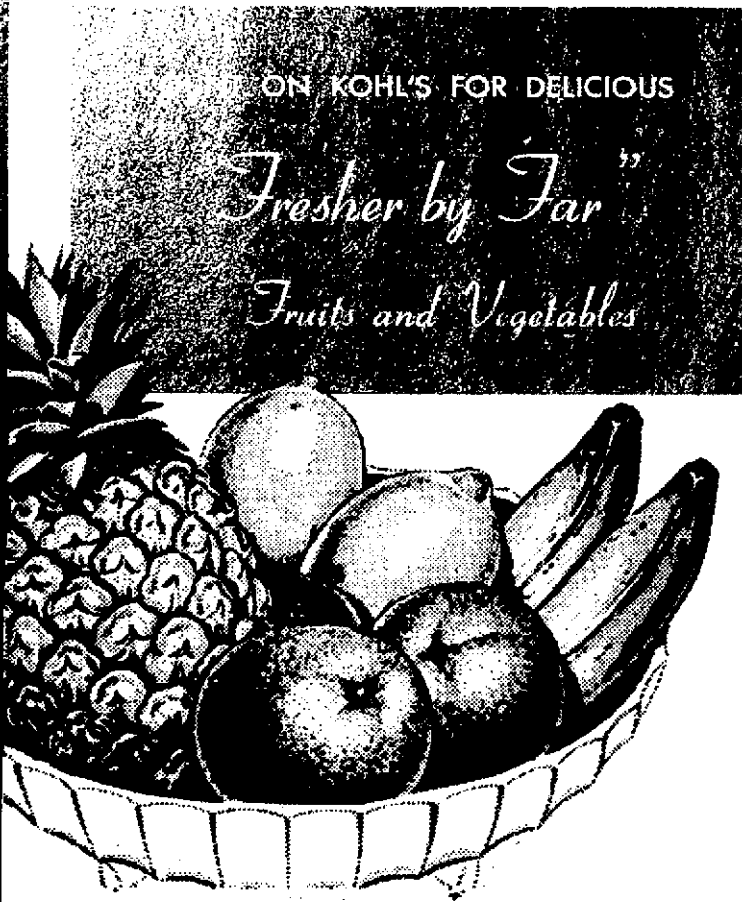

"No."

"Then you don't know how to steal."

Nixon increasingly under fire from Republicans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another conservative Republican senator has attacked President Nixon's handling of the Watergate affair while two others said most of their anti-Nixon mail is inspired by the President's enemies.

Sen. Peter H. Dominick, R-Colo., advised Republicans to declare political independence of the Nixon White House and said the party must cooperate in beginning impeachment proceedings to establish the President's innocence or guilt.

Dominick and Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott called on Nixon to make a complete disclosure of all tapes and documents relating to the Watergate investigations.

Scott and Vice President-designate Gerald R. Ford said Monday night there are no valid reasons for Nixon to resign, or for impeachment proceedings against the President.

Ford, the House Republican leader, told a testimonial dinner for Scott in Philadelphia that there is "no real sound ground" for the resignation of the President.

And Scott, the Senate GOP leader, said, "The President has not defied any law or any court. He has not committed any impeachable offense. Yet he is being tried without a trial and he is being convicted without evidence."

Last week, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said public confidence in Nixon is so low that his only hope of escape is to appear voluntarily before the Senate Watergate committee and testify under oath.

However, speaking Monday in Logan, Utah, Goldwater said that Nixon should not resign. "Nothing that has gone on so far makes me think that he should," Goldwater said.

Goldwater said also that he opposes impeachment. "If, however, they can prove that he was dishonest, he should be impeached."

The committee is set to vote on a proposal by Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., who suggested the panel tell the President it is willing to meet him privately at the White House, question him without placing him under oath, and make the transcript of the session public.

Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., has suggested Nixon resign but Scott rejected that idea.

"I don't think the President should resign," he said. "This has never been discussed in any leadership meeting or conference... I regret the statement by Sen. Brooke."

On the NBC-TV "Today" program, Thurmond said Nixon had lost confidence "because of the campaign of the radical wing of the news media, bending the true facts. Those who lost the election are still against him. Although they lost the election they still want to run the country." The mail of most members of Congress has been running heavily against the President. Two senators said they believe it is politically inspired.

Sens. William L. Scott, R-Va., and Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said they believe most of their anti-Nixon mail is coming from supporters of Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., or is inspired by such groups as the AFL-CIO, Common Cause and the American Civil Liberties Union. All three groups have called for Nixon's resignation or impeachment.

The Virginia Republican said a spot check with the writers of 1,000 anti-Nixon communications received by his office showed 77 per cent had voted for McGovern in the 1972 presidential election.

Another conservative, Sen. James L. Buckley, Con.-R.Y., said however that he believes most of his mail on the subject was a genuine and spontaneous outburst caused by the firing of special prosecutor Archibald Cox and the resignation of Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson.

Meanwhile, a call for "absolute and total disclosure" by the White House and the President came from ousted Deputy Atty. Gen. William D. Ruckelshaus.

And Republican Gov. Thomas Meskill of Connecticut said the President owed the public a better explanation of why he

Resignation idea 'foolish'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Referring to "this Watergate foolishness," White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler says President Nixon won't resign "no matter how great the criticism."

Using the strongest no-resignation language yet offered by the White House, Ziegler volunteered to newsmen flying back with Nixon from Florida Monday night:

"The President is not a quitter and he never has been."

In the President's view, Ziegler said, a resignation now would run counter to the entire constitutional system and do violence to what Nixon regards as his continuing mandate from those who gave him a landslide re-election victory a year ago.

Ziegler said Nixon is currently devoting most of his time and attention to the search for a Middle East peace and to mounting energy problems — "not to this Watergate foolishness."

Asked if he meant to use that term to characterize the continuing Watergate investigations and related developments, Ziegler said, "I call it foolishness and tragedy."

The White House spokesman acknowledged that Nixon, during a four day stay in Florida, did devote part of his time to Watergate-related matters and will be acting to dispel what Ziegler described as "a time of great suspicion and turmoil."

Asked what Nixon will do, he replied, "he's going to do an awful lot."

Declining to elaborate, Ziegler said Nixon's course will unfold over the weeks and months ahead.

"He's not a man who steps aside and walks away from adversity. He's never done that in his entire political career and he's not going to do it now," said Ziegler.

Among those who made the flight back to Washington with Nixon was Stephen Bull, his appointments secretary, who was to resume testimony today in U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica's hearing on the circumstances surrounding the nonexistence of tapes for two presidential conversations that have interested Watergate prosecutors.

Two of Nixon's principal Watergate lawyers, J. Fred Buzhardt and Leonard Garment, flew to Florida Saturday night and returned to Washington Monday in advance of Nixon.

Nixon scheduled a 3 p.m. Cabinet meeting today to discuss energy problems aggravated by a cutoff of Arab oil shipments to this country.

The President will unveil new energy conservation measures, probably Wednesday

Firemen defy order on strikes

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New York's firemen walked off the job today in a potentially grim strike, the first since the city's fire department was organized 108 years ago.

The action was in defiance of a court order under which each fireman could be cited for contempt. Pickets went up at some fire stations, but officials said they did not know immediately if all of the city's 11,000 firemen decided to strike.

The Fire Department reported that only four of the approximately 80 companies assigned to Manhattan were manned. Reports from the four other boroughs were not immediately available.

New York City averages about 323 fires a day. One of the first today following the strike was in the bedroom of a West Side apartment. The tenant, Ronald Greenhouse, was burned slightly while trying to put out the fire himself. His wife and two children were unhurt.

Battalion Fire Chief Peter Noonan responded to the fire and extinguished it with the aid of two policemen and building maintenance personnel.

Carlos Romero, the building superintendent, said the makeshift fire-fighting efforts were hampered by lack of proper equipment.

"We had to fight through all the smoke and everything," he said, "and had a hard time breathing."

President Richard Vizzini of the Uniformed Firefighters Assn. announced the strike action as union negotiators blamed Mayor John V. Lindsay for an impasse in contract talks.

Milwaukee fire fighters — numbering about 1,000 in a city of 700,000 — were ordered to cease a work slowdown today after National Guard units were called up to help fill diminished duty rosters.

William Carey, an aide to Mayor Henry Maier, said about 130 of the 300 firemen scheduled for duty today were out, the same number absent since the work action began Sunday. He said 170 firemen and 180 Guardsmen were manning the city's stations.

The New York firemen's strike added to the city's other strikes. The New York Daily News, the nation's largest-circulation newspaper, halted publication today, and another strike disrupted regular functioning of 48 privately owned voluntary hospitals and nursing homes.

Across the country, Trans World Airlines flights were grounded because of a strike of flight attendants.

The first New York firemen's picket line went up shortly after 8:30 a.m. EST across from the Summit Hotel where the all-night talks had been in progress.

Mediator Eric Schmertz refused to explain why the talks broke down other than to say, "Some progress was made but not enough progress to fill all the gaps."

"We had something that we could have lived with but Lindsay thinks that he's going to fight fires by himself," said one UFA negotiator. The fire fighters voted overwhelmingly Monday to stage the strike, despite a law which prohibits strikes by municipal employees.

Lindsay met with top fire and police officials late Monday night to review emergency measures intended to maintain adequate fire protection.

The plans included use of fire officers, who are not striking, civilians to man hoses and reassignment of fire headquarters personnel to form a special mid-city emergency fire team.

The union has been asking for a $2,000 increase in the firemen's $14,300 annual base pay.

The "total strike" by the UFA would be the first fullscale walkout since the city firefighting force was formed 108 years ago. The union had previously staged partial job actions.

In Milwaukee, there was no immediate indication whether firemen would obey a temporary restraining order issued by Circuit Court Judge Harvey Neelen.

Dozens of National Guardsmen helped with tasks ranging from holding hoses to prying motorists out of wrecked cars. However, they were prohibited from entering burning buildings.

City officials said fire protection remained normal despite the work slowdown. Fire Chief William Stamm said about a third of the scheduled work force had stayed home Sunday and Monday. The firemen's union in Milwaukee totals about 1,000 members.

The 2.1 million-circulation Daily News in New York was forced to stop publication because of a strike called Monday by the AFL-CIO New York Newspaper Guild. Within hours after the walkout began, the guild reached a tentative accord with The New York Times.

Kissinger continues talks in Tunis

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger today left Morocco, the first stop on his Middle East peace tour, after seven hours of talks with King Hassan II in Rabat. His next stop was Tunis, for a meeting with President Habib Bourguiba, before continuing to Cairo tonight.

On the Golan Heights ceasefire line Syria reported its jets drove off two formations of Israeli planes that fired air-to-ground rockets at Syrian advance positions.

On the Suez cease-fire front, Israel reported new tensions and clashes with Egyptian troops.

As he left Rabat, Kissinger said his talks with Hassan "were conducted in an attitude of friendship but also contributed greatly to my understanding of the point of view of the Arab countries."

The secretary of state declared, "I leave here with an even greater determination and, I hope, greater courage, to contribute to bringing a peace to the Middle East that is just to all peoples of the Middle East."

Arab leaders were conferring busily meanwhile and diplomatic sources in Beirut said an Arab summit conference has been scheduled tentatively for mid-November in Algiers. King Hussein of Jordan, the latest to enter the rounds of Arab consultations, flew to Saudi Arabia. He is known to favor to summit of Arab heads of state.

Kissinger, a Jew making his first visit to the Arab world, got a warm reception in Rabat. The official newspaper Le Matin said in a front-page editorial that relations between Morocco, a major recipient of U.S. economic aid, and Washington have "never suffered the slightest deterioration or eclipse and have invariably remained filled with sincerity, cordiality and high mutual regard."

Kissinger's aides said he expects no spectacular breakthroughs on his trip but is trying to work out a procedure for Arab-Israeli peace negotiations and to smooth out such current problems as the Arab demand for Israeli troops to pull back from territory they occupied after the first cease-fire Oct. 22 and Israeli demands for an exchange of prisoners of war.

The aides said Kissinger was confident that a prisoner exchange could be arranged easily once Israel and the Arabs agreed on a "process of peace."

The Cairo newspaper Al Gomhouria reported that President Anwar Sadat and the other Egyptian leaders would stress to Kissinger their demand for Israeli troops to pull back. Israel has shown no intention of making such a withdrawal, which would release the Egyptian 3rd Army from encirclement in the Sinai Desert.

From Cairo, Kissinger goes to Jordan and Saudi Arabia, then on to Iran, Pakistan and China.

Meanwhile, Arab leaders were also travelling. Algerian President Houari Boumedienne arrived in Riyadh, the Saudi capital, and met with King Faisal after visiting Iraq, Egypt, Kuwait and Syria.

Boumedienne is trying to line up another Arab summit conference in Algiers, and press reports said Egypt and Syria were ready to attend.

The Saudi radio said Boumedienne and Faisal also discussed the Arab oil sanctions against nations supporting Israel.

Col Moammar Khadafy, the outspoken Libyan strongman, visited Damascus after stops in Cairo and Baghdad.

Jaworski silent on laundering of CIA funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of a Houston foundation says special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski once approved use of the foundation to launder money for the Central Intelligence Agency.

Jaworski declined on Monday to answer a list of written questions about the matter. He issued a terse denial through his office, but was quoted by a Houston newspaper as acknowledging that he may have had some role in the conduit arrangement.

John Freeman, president of the Houston-based M.D. Anderson Foundation, said Jaworski voted with him and the group's other two directors to approve a request by a CIA representative to pass money to an international lawyer's group.

Freeman, who was one of Jaworski's law partners, said the foundation forwarded more than $900,000 at the CIA's request to the American Fund for Free Jurists Inc.

Freeman said the arrangement continued for several years until it was exposed in 1967 along with a bevy of secret CIA subsidies to supposedly independent groups including the National Student Association.

A House subcommittee concluded last week that top CIA officials had been "duped" into helping the cover-up by White House officials who misused their authority.

However, some other members of Congress, including vice chairman Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., of the Senate Watergate committee, are known to harbor suspicions that the CIA was more deeply involved than has been publicly admitted.

Even the House subcommittee which cleared the agency also stated that there were "material inconsistencies" in the sworn testimony of CIA Deputy Director Vernon A. Walters, a key figure in the affair.

After being sworn in Monday as President Nixon's new special prosecutor, Jaworski met with his staff and later issued a paraphrase of his remarks.

Jaworski said he anticipates no staff changes, that he "had been assured complete control over the entire case," and that he "was not precluded from taking any action against the President which he deems necessary." Nixon has said he won't release any presidential papers or tapes except those covered by a previous appeals court ruling.

Jaworski also urged his staff to guard against news leaks. "He reminded the staff that what is learned in these offices is very confidential and must be held in the most sacred confidence," the summary said.

Although Jaworski declined to answer written questions about the CIA matter, he volunteered through a spokesman that he doesn't intend to resign directorship of the Anderson foundation. The spokesman said any questions about the matter could be directed to Jaworski personally at some future news conference.

Freeman, in a telephone interview, said he sees nothing wrong with the arrangement, and described it as being "in furtherance of law and order throughout the free world."

Freeman said he assumes that the money came from the government, although it passed into the Anderson foundation through a group of other foundations. These were identified in 1967 news accounts as dummies set up by the CIA.

He said a CIA man requested the conduit arrangement because the jurists group would have refused direct government support. "What he did was to assure us that it was a good organization and that the government was in favor of what it was doing," he said. He also said he believes Jaworski was aware of the arrangement during the several years that it was in effect. "I'm quite sure that he did know as it went along," Freeman said. Freeman said he explained to Jaworski and the other directors that the arrangement had been requested by a CIA man.

Jaworski issued a denial. "To his knowledge he has never acted directly or indirectly as a conduit for Central Intelligence Agency funds used for any purpose," a spokesman said late Monday.

Jaworski was quoted differently by the Houston Chronicle, which said the special prosecutor had acknowledged he might have played some part in the conduit arrangement, although he didn't know that the funds were from the government.

The newspaper also quoted Jaworski as saying he doesn't believe the CIA matter will affect his job as special Watergate prosecutor.

Among the matters under Jaworski's jurisdiction are still-lingering questions about the role of the CIA in the Watergate burglary and the subsequent cover-up.

Speener ignores writ

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post-Crescent staff writer

On advice from his attorney, who called for an end to "the witch hunt," Eugene K. Speener, Outagamie County Health Center superintendent, disregarded a subpoena to appear at a Board of Social Services meeting Monday afternoon.

At the suggestion of County Board Chairman Russell DeLaHunt, an attempt will be made to set up an informal meeting with Speener so the social services board can again try to get answers to questions it has about Speener and his operation of the Health Center. No date was set for the meeting, which DeLaHunt said he wants to attend.

Speener's attorney, Dennis Herring, gave notice, however, that his client probably will not answer some personal questions that also went unanswered Monday.

When Speener declined an invitation to appear at the meeting, Chairman Eugene Higgins subpoenaed him through the sheriff's department Monday morning.

Higgins said state statutes give a county board committee chairman subpoena power.

Herring argued that the power is given only to chairmen of committees authorized to investigate the affairs of the county or its officials.

Herring quoted Corp. Counsel William Schuh as saying that the county board had not given investigative or subpoena authority to the board of social services.

Therefore, Herring told the board, he advised Speener not to obey the subpoena.

Herring charged the board with "a veiled threat to intimidate and coerce" Speener by ordering his appearance. He spent much of the time damning the Post-Crescent for "overpublicizing" and "sensationalizing" issues involving Speener and the Health Center over the past six months.

Speener's rights, according to Herring, "have been trampled upon, disregarded and cast aside and he has been subjected to far more than I think he is required to take."

Supv. John Kellogg recited the questions the board would have asked Speener. The questions, according to Kellogg, reflect the board's concern over the way Speener runs the Health Center.

The questions have nothing to do with the three criminal charges that were brought against Speener after a John Doe investigation, Kellogg said. The charges were dismissed at a preliminary hearing last month.

Kellogg told Herring the board wants to know:

— Why the per patient cost at the Health Center is so much higher than at Riverview Sanatorium and County General Hospital and is among the highest in Wisconsin.

— If Speener intentionally omitted his Barron County job experience from his Outagamie application in 1967. The Post-Crescent reported that he was a caseworker supervisor in the Barron County Welfare Department from March, 1968, to September, 1969.

The former welfare director in Barron County said Speener "had trouble establishing and maintaining rapport with his staff."

Kellogg believed that misstatement of facts in a job application is grounds for dismissal.

— How much time Speener spends making personal telephone calls. Speener was charged with billing the county for personal, long distance telephone calls to Racine. The bills totalled about $500. Indications were Speener was diverting a lot of his duty time to telephone calls, Kellogg said.

— About the loss of a large number of medical syringes from the Health Center. The Post-Crescent reported last June that the Health Center over ordered 3,000 syringes, which later were returned to the company, and that at least 266 syringes apparently were stolen from locked cabinets.

Kellogg said the board wanted to know if Speener had permitted a person known to have illegal involvement with drugs to have access to the locked medical storage area.

— More about the accidental death of a welfare patient at the Health Center last winter and other accidents which seriously injured two other patients. The death was not reported to the

Trees termed hazard to traffic

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent staff writer

The weekend deaths of two Menasha men whose car was wrapped around one of the row of trees located just off U.S. 10 a mile east of Dale will bring a renewed effort to have the trees removed as traffic hazards.

The tree the car carrying the two victims struck was only seven feet, five inches from the edge of the pavement. County traffic authorities said the whole line of trees are approximately that distance from the pavement.

The property owner and other conservationists previously have successfully fought off efforts to cut down the trees nearest the highway, but Charles Ryan, state Division of Highways district 3 engineer, Green Bay, said he would again attempt to have them removed if a review showed they were hazardous.

Clarence Brownson, Outagamie highway commissioner, said he attempted to remove them a year ago, but opposition prevented it. He noted that highway construction rules today dictate at least a 30-foot clearance of hazardous objects, such as trees.

The promised investigation by the state was stimulated by State Rep. Tobias Roth, R-Appleton, who in recent months has complained about the hazards of U.S. 10 from Appleton to Fremont and pushed for a state commitment to list the stretch among its upcoming reconstruction priorities.

Roth said he was assured by Ryan this morning that the division would urge Gov. Patrick J. Lucey to include that road in his priority listing, increasing its chances for quicker improvement. He said it then would be up to the legislature to provide funding for the improvement, which, he said, would be a four-lane road, possibly relocated to a route north of the present 10.

Outagamie and state highway authorities agree that the stretch of 10 from Appleton to Fremont is unsatisfactory for present traffic counts (probably over 4,400 vehicles per day) and should be upgraded. Ryan said he told Roth he would aim at a 1980 date for completion of the new roadway.

He expressed concern about trees being only about seven feet from the roadway. To cut trees when the owner objects, he said, the division must convince the state highway commission that the safety factor overrides the private individual's rights.

The state also is concerned about the width and the lack of adequate shoulder. U.S. 10 at the site of the double fatality is about 22 feet wide with about 66 feet of total right-of-way space. Brownson said state highways generally have over 100 and up to 150 feet of right-of-way.

He said the nearby trees also concerned the county highway department because they tended to shade the road and hamper the melting of ice on the roadway.

Despite the growing concern for safety on the stretch of 10 west of the city (which includes about 15 miles in Outagamie), Coroner Bernard Kemps said there have been only five fatalities there since 1968. Of these, one was a child who darted into the path of a car and another involved a red-light violation at 10 and U.S. 45.

The other three were this year, including a man who lost control of his car last February and struck a tree just west of Dale off 10.

Kemps and Lt. Robert Keating, of the county traffic section, agreed that 10 was not the safest highway, but they pointed out that other roads in the county had higher accident and death rates, and that high speed and alcohol generally were among the biggest factors in fatalities.

In the double fatality Sunday, witnesses said the victims' vehicle was traveling at a high rate of speed and seemed to go out of control after it had passed another car. A third vehicle was forced to the shoulder by the victims' vehicle.

Brownson said one temporary answer might be to lower the speed limit on the road from 65 daytime to perhaps 55 miles per hour. He was critical of the quality of today's drivers.

The stretch of 10 west of Appleton to Fremont was built about 1920 and is not adequate to handle today's vehicles and today's speeds, he said.

But, Brownson said, efforts to take safety measures, such as cutting trees or speed limits, meet strong opposition.

BIW to dedicate addition

BRILLION — Representatives of the city and state, as well as Brillion Iron Works and its parent firm, Beatrice Foods Co., Chicago, are expected to attend the dedication Thursday of a $4 million addition to BIW, this community's largest employer.

The dedication will include a luncheon and ceremony, followed by tours of the new portion and the rest of the plant and an evening banquet at the Branch River Country Club, Branch.

A Brillion Iron Works spokesman said more tours of the addition are planned for Saturday, including tours for employees and families from 8 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., and for the public from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The addition, which was completed recently, has added 62,000 square feet of floor space and allows a 40 per cent increase in production. About 100 new employees are being added and will bring total employment to about 900.

Heading the delegation at the dedication will be Don L. Grantham, president of Beatrice Foods, and R.D. Peters, founder and board chairman of BIW. Others attending from the companies include George N. Schenck, BIW president, and Harry Weaver, vice president of engineering.

Clarence Wolf, Brillion mayor, and Wisconsin Atty. Gen. Robert Warren also are expected to attend.

Brillion Iron Works, founded in 1933, manufactures gray and ductile iron castings and a line of farm implements. It became a division of Beatrice Foods in 1969.

Farmhouse destroyed in fire today

BLACK CREEK — Fire destroyed the two-story farmhouse of the Melvin LaFond family near the intersection of Ott and Twelve Corners roads about 2 1/2 miles southeast of the village early today.

No one was in the home when the fire was reported by an Outagamie County patrolman about 3 a.m.

Four units from the Black Creek Fire Department were called to the scene. Several firemen remained there late this morning.

According to Fire Chief Edward Shaw, the blaze broke out in a second floor bedroom and spread to the first floor. He said the house was engulfed in flames and the second floor was destroyed when the firemen arrived.

Shaw said the last person in the home left about 1 a.m. The couple has been on vacation, but a daughter stayed behind and was spending the night at a neighbor's residence.

Shaw said the fire was contained to the house, which was an old wood frame structure. No damage estimate was available. The cause of the blaze has not been determined.

Charge against Lorge's nephew is dismissed

SHAWANO, Wis. (AP) — A judge dismissed a charge against a Clintonville motorist Monday after the young man appeared in Shawano County Court with his uncle, State Sen. Gerald Lorge.

Lorge, a Republican from Bear Creek, served as defense attorney for Daniel J. Lorge, 24, who was charged with unsafe deviation from a traffic lane concerning a June 10 auto accident.

Judge Orville S. Luckenbach dismissed the charge after listening to testimony from the younger Lorge and his girl friend.

The state presented its case Sept. 13. Luckenbach said neither side had established who was at fault in the collision.

Bank collection point of donations to fund for badly burned boy

He has been at Theda Clark Hospital, Neenah, since being taken there from the Shawano Community Hospital at the time of the accident. He will be at Theda Clark for many more months.

Anyone wishing to contribute to the fund should contact the Shawano National Bank. Any cards, letters or donations will be welcomed. Ronald's address is Room 263B, Theda Clark Hospital, Neenah.

Clintonville asks DNR to divert water for irrigation experiment

Post-Crescent Madison bureau

MADISON — The Clintonville Joint School District has asked the Department of Natural Resources for a permit to divert water from the north branch of the Pigeon River for irrigation in an experimental agricultural project.

The site is located in the Town of Larrabee and the DNR has announced that it will decide within 30 days whether to hold a public hearing on the matter.

Education big share of county budget

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent staff writer

Education normally is associated with school districts or with the vocational and technical schools. But Outagamie County is involved in education even though it no longer operates a county teachers college.

Projected costs under the education grouping for 1974 are $389,620. This is a drop of $196,000 from this year.

The decrease is the result of the state's eliminating the aid-to-common schools charge against the counties. This totaled $261,503 this year and will be paid by the state next year.

The largest single item under

Second of a six-part series

education now is the Plamann School for the handicapped. This is budgeted at $147,512 for 1974, an increase of about $28,000. Most of the increase is in the salary area where three aides have been added to the staff. About 75 per cent of the school's cost is funded through state aids.

The next largest item is the University Extension Service. Most people know this office as the county farm agent, but over the years the farm aspect has been expanded to include urban interests also. That budget is $83,443, an increase of $6,000. Salaries account for two-thirds of that increase.

Other accounts under education include the University of Wisconsin Center-Fox Valley, county aid to libraries, Cooperative Educational Service Agency, Highlands School in Appleton, the county fair and, next year only, the Alice in Dairyland contest.

Exchange student tells of summer in Germany

BY MAVIS KELLER
Post-Crescent correspondent

FOREST JUNCTION — A summer in Germany as an exchange student in the Youth for Understanding program provided Colleen Krahn, route 1, Brillion, with memories she shared with members of the men's group at Rural Brillion United Methodist Church recently.

Speaking at the annual guest night, Colleen told of the communication problem when she first arrived. She knew only a few words of German and her host family spoke very little English. "We went around for days with books in our hands and plenty of gestures to go with it." Though it was trying for awhile, Colleen was pleased that they couldn't speak English, "because I really learned how to speak German."

The host family had a son and daughter still going to school when Colleen arrived, so she went with them. Her biggest thrill in school was when she "taught" English. There was one apprehensive moment, however, when the instructor thought Colleen had misspelled a word. Anxieties were dispelled when the instructor looked up the word in a large dictionary and Colleen was right.

One of her most embarrassing moments was her first meal with the host family. There was no plate, only a mat that looked like a hot pad and a knife and fork. "There was nothing on the table that looked like anything I was used to eating, so I didn't know what was expected. The family waited for me and I sensed this, but it only made me more tense. Finally, the father grabbed his silverware and began. What he did, I did. What he ate, I ate."

The diet consisted mostly of pork and fish, which surprised Colleen. She

The only one of those items showing a major increase is UWCFV, which is up $11,000 to $14,450 for Outagamie's share. The campus is jointly operated with Winnebago County. Each county pays half of the building maintenance cost. A remodeling and air conditioning project is planned for next year.

Recreation is another grouping of budgets. For 1974 the proposed total is $56,479, a decrease of $64,000 from this year.

Included in this group are Plamann Park, Plamann Lake, Mosquito Hill Park, the various access sites on the Wolf River and aid to Kaukauna for the Grignon Home. Operational budgets for those items are almost unchanged from this year.

The big difference is in development. The county had $82,000 budgeted for Plamann Park development this year and has nothing in the budget for next year.

The county has, however, committed itself to a three-year development project and funds either will have to be budgeted or committed from other sources, probably the money received from the state to settle up health center accounts. Park development is 50 per cent funded through the Land and Water Conservation Act.

Conservation and development is another grouping which has a relationship to recreation. This group of seven budgets totals $84,591 for 1974, an increase of $3,500.

Departments are soil conservation, county wardens, tree planting, rezoning, county advertising and promotion, county planner and the East-Central

Courts

WAUPACA — Tom S. Martin, 58, 422 1/2 Sixth St., pleaded guilty in County Court Branch 2, Monday, to operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of an intoxicant.

Judge Nathan Wiese fined him $152 and costs and ordered Martin to attend driver safety school in lieu of losing his license.

A second citation for hit and run on Main Street, issued by city police, was dismissed.

WAUPACA — Norman Christensen, 21, 218 1/2 North Water St., New London, was fined $80 and costs for possessing an untaxed deer, when he appeared Monday in County Court Branch 2.

Christensen was arrested on Oct. 13 in the Town of Royalton by a conservation warden.

WAUPACA — Charges of disorderly conduct were dismissed Monday in County Court Branch 2 against Earl M. Beyer, 21, Shiocton.

Beyer had been accused of disorderly conduct after an incident on April 22 at the home of Lenore Boneck, East 4th St., Manawa, when she complained to the sheriff's department that the defendant and a companion were harassing her at her home.

Judge Wendell McHenry continued the case on Sept. 21 and set property bond at $100, with a pretrial hearing Nov. 2.

On Oct. 26, Beyer agreed with the district attorney that he would stay away from Lenore Boneck and a motion was made to dismiss the action. Judge Nathan Wiese dismissed the case.

WAUPACA — Anthony Vonberg, Wauwatosa, pleaded guilty in County Court Branch 2 Monday to the charge of trespass on a railroad and was fined $50 and costs, or five days in jail.

A second charge of theft was dismissed.

Charges were filed after an incident last August, when Sgt. John Bonnell, county police, responded to a sheriff department call that a truck was struck on a Soo Line Railroad right-of-way in the Town of Farmington. Bonnell removed the truck, averting a collision with an on-coming train and found the truck contained ties belonging to the Soo Line Railroad. There were 28 ties valued at $4 each.

WAUPACA — Howard Brickey, 48, who gave his address as general delivery, pleaded no contest to criminal trespass to land and disorderly conduct, when he appeared before Judge Nathan Wiese, County Court Branch 2, Monday.

He was given a 10-day jail sentence on each count, with sentences to run concurrently. Brickey has working privileges.

Brickey was arrested early Saturday morning, about 2:20 a.m., after he had entered the Donald L. Potter residence, 324 S. Main St., walked in the front door and into the kitchen and demanded something to eat.

Potter, according to the police report, threw Brickey out and called police. Answering the call, officers found the defendant in the West Union Street area, knocking on doors and trying to get in. He was arrested in the yard at 315 W. Union St. and taken to the county jail.

WAUPACA — Elmer O. Timm, 52, route 2, Manawa, pleaded guilty in County Court Branch 2 to driving after revocation.

Judge Nathan Wiese fined him $152, plus costs, or 20 days in jail and Timm is to serve a 10-day mandatory jail sentence to begin at 6 p.m., Nov. 12. He was granted working privileges.

Timm was cited on Nov. 4 on State 161 in the Town of Helvetia by County Officer James Kneisler.

WAUPACA — John Marshall, 18, 706 Holbeck St., was charged in County Court Branch 2, Monday, with disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

Judge Nathan Wiese appointed Laurie Anderson to represent Marshall and allowed the defendant to sign his own $200 appearance bond. Action was continued until 10:30 a.m. Nov. 12.

Marshall was arrested about 10:30 p.m., Saturday, by city police after he had allegedly caused a disturbance at the Polynesian by hitting the door and using profane language.

Sgt. Donald Fabricious tried to quiet him down in the parking lot, but according to the police report, the man started banging himself on the ground and hitting a big tree. He ran into the woods by Mt. Tom, stayed for a few minutes, and returned to the supper club parking lot, where he was told that he was under arrest. It took six police officers to put handcuffs on Marshall. He was taken to the county jail.

Initial OK for E. College Blvd.

BY FRANK CHURCH

The tangled E. College Avenue paving controversy took another unexpected turn Monday when the Appleton Street and Sanitation Committee recommended drawing up plans for a boulevard between Drew and Rankin streets.

The decision came after Public Works Director Robert Miller told the committee that while his budget recommendation that a temporary, 52-foot wide pavement might save the city some initial expense, the boulevard plan would carry better long term results for the area.

D. C. Eagle freed while awaiting trial

A member of a Chicago area motorcycle gang, held for nearly a week in the Outagamie County jail pending possible probation revocation proceedings, was released Monday after no court action was taken against him.

The man, Robert E. Freeman, 37, of Chicago, is free on bond pending his Jan. 4 trial in Green Lake County for an assault charge brought last Tuesday in Berlin.

Freeman was one of the defendants in the D.C. Eagles case, which involved the abduction and rape of two Appleton girls in and near Appleton and Little Chute last Feb. 25.

Freeman was one of five defendants who was found guilty of having sexual intercourse with a minor, and Acting Circuit Judge Robert Pfiffner of Chippewa Falls placed him on probation for five years and ordered that the defendant stay out of Wisconsin during that period.

Freeman's appearance in Berlin appeared to be in conflict with Pfiffner's order that he remain out of the state, but no action was taken against Freeman after Pfiffner conferred with Freeman's probation agent here.

Pfiffner told The Post-Crescent today that it would have been very difficult to revoke Freeman's probation only because the man returned to Wisconsin. He questioned whether this would really have constituted solid grounds for revoking probation, and that by imposing such a condition, he knew he was dealing in a "gray area," since argument could be made that the condition was not valid.

Freeman's agent said his client could still face probation revocation if he is convicted on the Green Lake County charge. Revocation would mean that Freeman would be sent to the state prison for five years.

Speener . . .

county welfare department, Kellogg said.

Why Speener moved ahead with plans to convert part of the Health Center to nursing home use without concurrence by the social services board. Speener had said he would proceed only with the concurrence of the social services board and the county board, Kellogg remarked.

If Speener knew when he purchased $1,800 worth of floor wax two years ago that the wax was unsuitable for Health Center floors. Speener had been charged with accepting a television set from Hyde Park Chemical Co. of New York in return for his order for the wax which was not used. He admitted receiving the television set during his John Doe testimony.

Why Speener spent $850 for a new snowmobile for the Health Center last April.

Higgins said his board has been unable to get answers from Speener or Health Center trustees on questions it started asking a year ago.

"We have people and money out there," Kellogg told Herring in justifying the board's concern over Health Center matters.

About one-fourth of the 240 Health Center patients are welfare recipients, Kellogg said.

Wound fatal to Kaukauna youth

GREEN BAY — Mark Rennie, 17, Kaukauna, who was wounded in the forehead Sunday noon while target practicing near Greenleaf, died Monday afternoon at a Green Bay hospital.

The youth had been listed in critical condition since the accident. According to authorities, a .22 caliber pistol belonging to a friend's brother discharged after it apparently became jammed.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rennie, 1609 Kenneth Ave., Kaukauna.

Budget. . .

Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission.

Only the last two items show any change from this year. The county planner's budget is down $6,500, while the county's share of the regional planning budget is up $11,400.

Only the rezoning budget has any revenue to offset expenses. The revenue is from the filing fee charged people who want property rezoned.

Amherst quilting class

AMHERST — Quilting classes are being initiated here through the Portage County Extension Homemakers.

Mrs. Owen Sannes, county cultural arts chairman, is in charge of the program, a part of the Extension Heritage Crafts Project. Mrs. Rufus Powers, instructor, will teach old-fashioned quilting at 1 p.m. Tuesdays and at 7 p.m. Thursdays.

It will also cost more. The 52-foot temporary pavement carried a price tag of $56,700. The boulevard plan would cost $189,000. Roughly $156,000 of that cost would be paid by the city.

The committee's recommendation goes to the City Council Wednesday, which can decide whether to put money for it in the 1974 budget. The actual recommendation is to proceed with design work, but does not specify a construction date.

There is currently nothing in the budget for the E. College project. Miller's original proposal to widen the street to 52 feet with concrete was taken out because of its high cost, also $189,000. In its place, Miller suggested a 52-foot asphalt pavement, which would last 10 years but give traffic in the area some relief until, and if, a bypass plan is implemented to carry traffic north of College Avenue.

Miller's less expensive proposal was taken out of Mayor James Sutherland's executive budget last week. The finance committee wanted to see the long-range recommendations of the city's planning consultants, Harland Bartholomew and Associates, before making any recommendations.

Indecision over when the work would be done remained at Monday's street and sanitation meeting. Ald. Edward Maloney (9th), said "if and when" work is done on the 2,100 foot stretch of roadway, it should follow the boulevard concept.

Miller told the committee that if it was looking for a "cheap, first cost solution," the temporary pavement was the route to go. It would be "better off building the boulevard" if "you can afford it," he added, however.

Lawrence University President Thomas Smith said that for "aesthetic" and "safety" reasons, the boulevard concept was more acceptable than the street widening proposal. But he said he hoped "all alternate bypasses are examined very carefully" when the committee mulls long-term solutions to the area's traffic and pedestrian problems.

Planning consultants will let the city know what they envision as a long-term traffic plan for the area by Jan. 1. At that time, the city can decide whether it wants to follow that recommendation or move in some other direction.

But whatever it does, officials agree,

Rotarians hear program about ambulance

CLINTONVILLE — A program dealing with ambulance service for the city was presented Monday at the luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club at Riverside Golf Club.

Jerry Smith, District 4 representative of the state Highway Safety Division, and Vern Johnson, director of Emergency Government for Waupaca County, presented the program and told of the aids that could be received for an ambulance service for Clintonville.

Frank Sinkewicz was the program chairman and his guests were hospital and nursing home personnel and city officials.

Jane Heideman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Heideman, Clintonville, was recognized as the student of the week. She is a member of the American Field Service board, a cheerleader, a member of Truckettes and a member of the senior class play cast. She plans to attend college after high school and pursue a career in marketing.

Fund-raising concert at Iola

IOLA — A concert to raise money for acoustical shells for the high school will be presented at 8 p.m. Sunday by the Iola-Scandinavia Community Chorus.

The chorus, directed by Daniel Warschauer, school district music director, will present a program of sacred music related to Thanksgiving. The concert will be in the high school auditorium.

Tickets are available from chorus members and businesses in the two communities. Advance tickets are $1 for adults, 50 cents for students under 12. Children under 5 will be admitted free. Cost at the door will be $1.25 for adults.

Courts

WAUPACA — Two Clintonville men, William H. Janke, 19, route 1, and Daniel L. Gehrke, 19, route 3, were charged with two counts of attempted arson and two counts of attempted arson of property when they appeared Monday in County Court Branch 2. Their preliminary hearings were set for 11 a.m. Nov. 12.

Both men were returned to the Waupaca County jail, until they have obtained two property owner signers on $1,000 property bond and $100 cash.

Officer James A. Krause, Clintonville Police Department, apprehended the two men and obtained voluntary statements that they were involved in the setting of a number of fires on Oct. 27 in the City of Clintonville and the Town of Matteson.

They allegedly lighted a pile of leaves at the streets intersection of Harriet and Pearl, Clintonville; set leaves afire at various locations in Bucholtz Park, Clintonville, endangering various buildings at the park; lighted matches to leaves and other dry materials on First Street near Knaack Road, Town of Matteson, in an attempt to destroy property there and set a second fire on School Road, Town of Matteson in an attempt to destroy nearby property.

something has to be done before the ten years it will take to implement a bypass plan is up.

Miller said the boulevard proposal, which was initially made by Lawrence as an alternative to Miller's widening proposal, would be a good interim as well as final solution to the street's traffic-pedestrian tangle.

Miller said the boulevard would "lend itself" to abandonment in the future, and "may fit well with the university's future plans." He also noted that if the city decides in favor of using College as a major traffic thoroughfare, and scraps bypass plans, a boulevard would also be "very acceptable."

If the boulevard plan were included in the 1974 budget with Miller's estimated city cost of about $156,000, it would add about 28 cents to the tax rate. That, if other finance committee additions made to the budget last week are approved, would push the net city tax rate for 1974 about one per cent above the rate this year.

Some of that city cost could be offset by state funding, although that has yet to be fully explored.

If the city goes the boulevard route, Lawrence has also said it would landscape the median strip and surrounding terraces and maintain them in the future. That would also lower the cost to the city, Miller noted.

The Lawrence University plan called for a boulevard to run between Drew and Lawe streets, but Miller said today that one satisfactory for the city would have to run all the way east to Rankin Street.

A width for the boulevard is uncertain. Miller gave a range of between 62 and 72 feet Monday. The Lawrence plan called for a 61-foot total width, with a 13-foot median.

With the median, university and city officials believe lights at the intersections of Drew and Lawe streets would not have to be synchronized to permit easier crossing, because students could avoid traffic at the median strip.

Minimum wage expected to hit $1.80-$1.85 per hour

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The basic minimum wage in Wisconsin, now at $1.60 an hour, may be boosted by 20 or 25 cents in January, a state official indicated Monday.

The final decision will be made by commissioners of the state Department of Industry, Labor and Human Relations. They have statutory authority to raise the rate after an annual review takes into account the current cost of living.

Harley Jackson, director of the agency's statistics bureau, told the commissioners that August and September data suggested that the state minimum wage rate should go up about 20 cents.

Based on the present cost of living trend, "we'll probably be talking about $1.80 to $1.85 as the new minimum wage," he said.

Commission chairman Philip Lerman said he hoped the expected January action would not produce "moans and groans about driving industry out of the state."

Such complaints would hardly be in line with record profits recently recorded by industry, he said.

Wisconsin's minimum wage law applies only to women and minors over age 17 in non-agricultural jobs. Rates for other minors and for women working in agriculture are computed from the basic minimum.

Outlook good for power plant site legislation

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A utilities spokesman and a Public Service Commission official forecast smooth sailing for proposed legislation to regulate the selection of plant sites for electricity generators.

But a member of the state Assembly, discussing the legislation Monday at a PSC review meeting, predicted the legislature would balk.

The bill under consideration would require power utilities to file their plant plans with the commission 10 years in advance, giving the agency adequate time to gauge safety and environmental aspects.

Despite some differences over a few provisions, the proposal seems acceptable to most persons, commission chairman William Eich said.

"I have not seen anything yet that would stand in the way of getting a bill," he said.

John G. Quale, Wisconsin Electric Power Co. president, said the industry acknowledged the wisdom of some form of supervision of site selection.

"We have subscribed to the idea that if we are going to be able to build power plants in this state, we are going to need a power-plant siting bill," he said.

Republican Rep. John Niebler of Menomonee Falls, however, predicted legislative opposition to what he called a threat of "dictatorial" authority in the hands of a state agency.

Even if "everybody in this room agreed on a bill, there still would be resistance," Niebler said.

Democratic Gov. Patrick J. Lucey has said he considers the bill one of the more important pieces of pending legislation this fall.

Eich reacted with annoyance to the suggestion that the PSC would be getting excessive authority, remarking that many persons "have been working on this bill for the better part of a year."

"People who write to us seem to think that we have some kind of handle on this," Eich said. "We do not have a handle. I see my job as bringing the public and the state into the process."

New obscenity law urged

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Raymond Johnson, R-Eleva, has called on Atty. Gen. Robert Warren to assist in drafting a new state obscenity law which would survive a constitutional test.

Johnson said in a letter to Warren he would urge that Gov. Patrick J. Lucey include such legislation he calls the lawmakers into special session.

"The purveyors of filth must not gain a foothold that may corrupt our community standard," he said.

Johnson said the state must act in view of a recent federal three-judge panel's decision that Wisconsin's anti-obscenity law is unconstitutional.

The panel said judges and the state should be given an opportunity to change the law in light of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling in June that a basic guideline for determining obscenity should be whether "the work depicts or describes in a patently offensive way, sexual conduct specifically defined by the applicable state law."

Wisconsin law does not specifically define patently offensive sexual conduct, but prohibits the sale or display of "any lewd, obscene or indecent" material.

An aide to Warren, Daniel Hanley, said a reply was being drafted in response to Johnson's request for advice.

Dismissed prof seeks damages

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Testimony got underway Monday in U.S. District Court in a damage suit filed by a former University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh professor who was dismissed after he criticized the handling of a black student demonstration at the school.

David Roth, who is now teaching at Purdue University in Lafayette, Ind., is suing for $25,000 damages he contends his career and his reputation sustained.

Roth criticized the suspension of 92 of the approximately 100 black students at the campus after the 1968 demonstration.

Kurt Wenner, who now teaches at Northern Illinois University in DeKalb, testified that administrators did not consult with him although he was chairman of one of the departments in which Roth served.

Roth earlier sued the university on the grounds that he was entitled to receive a reason for his firing, but the U.S. Supreme Court said that since Roth did not have tenure he could be fired without stated reasons.

Lucey delegation to visit Nicaragua

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Gov. Patrick J. Lucey leaves Wednesday with his wife and five other persons on a five-day tour of Nicaragua.

Lucey's office said the governor will dedicate an elementary school built with contributions from Wisconsin citizens, and will visit sister communities of Fort Atkinson, Fond du Lac and Racine.

Accompanying the Lucey's are former Gov. and Mrs. John Reynolds, Dr. Ned Wallace of the University of Wisconsin, Norma Ben Vides of the Wisconsin Partners in the Americas program, and Robert Dunn, the governor's executive secretary.

Reynolds was governor when Wisconsin was assigned Nicaragua in The Partners in the Americas program.

Wisconsin donated funds, food and technical advisers when the Latin American nation was hit by floods in 1971 and by an earthquake a year ago.

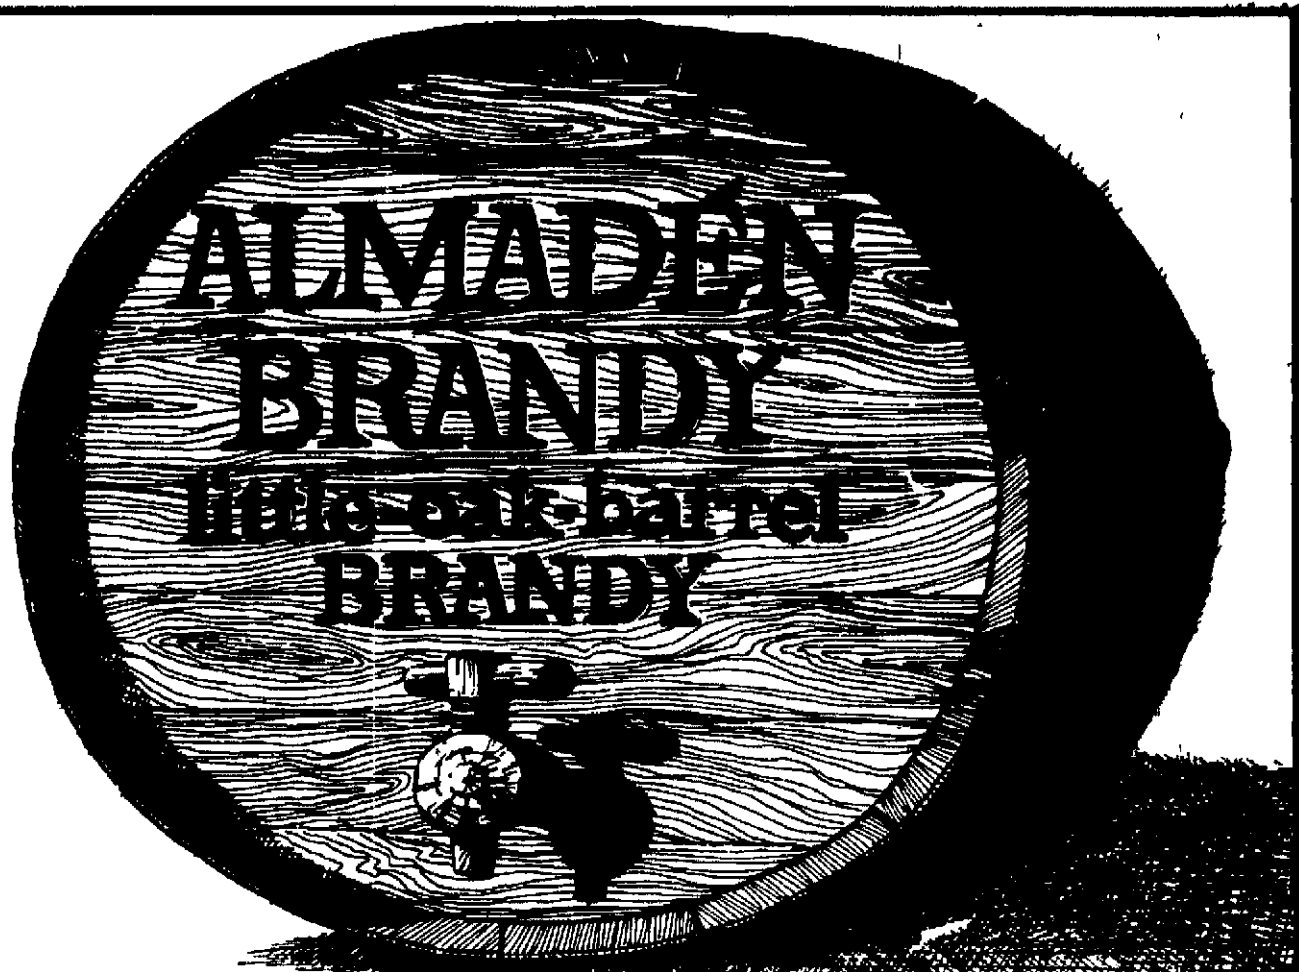

Lucey's office said the cost of the trip is being borne by the Nicaragua government.

Christmas lights will burn less at Madison

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Plans to postpone lighting Madison's downtown Christmas decorations until early December and to turn them off earlier than usual each night were announced today by a Chamber of Commerce committee in an effort to conserve energy.

The Central Madison Committee said the decorations will burn only until 8 p.m. from Dec. 7 until Christmas, instead of burning late into the night from Thanksgiving until Christmas as they have in the past.

A Milwaukee area shopping center announced plans last month to cut back on holiday decorations and the time they are lighted.

Beer bar switch tops expectations

Post-Crescent Staff Writer
MADISON — Former beer bar owners, who campaigned successfully last spring to get legislation passed that would allow them to obtain liquor licenses, have been filing license applications in far greater numbers than most people, including the consenting legislators, ever expected.

Lobbying strenuously behind the argument that beer bar owners should be given a fair chance to compete for the new 18-year-old Wisconsin adult, the Wisconsin Malt Beverage Association helped push and pass a bill that would allow local municipalities to grant liquor licenses to beer bars that were in operation Feb. 1, 1972.

The bill passed both houses of the legislature early last summer and was signed into law by Gov. Patrick J. Lucey June 29.

At the time, spokesmen for the Malt Beverage Association and legislators who supported their argument insisted that the new law would affect fewer than 500 beer bar owners. Some, including Sen. Dale McKenna, D-Jefferson, said it would affect only about

But Gordon Chayka, director of Justice Department's Alcohol and Tobacco Enforcement division, said that 649 former beer bar owners have been granted liquor licenses since July 1. Deadline for filing an application is Dec. 31 and Chayka says it is certain that more will come.

Asked if he felt that some local municipalities were granting liquor licenses over the state quota to persons other than beer bar owners, Chayka revealed that 71 license applications are currently being held up pending further study.

"According to the newspaper accounts last summer," Chayka said, "the new law was supposed to affect only a couple hundred beer bars. But I felt even then that there would be more."

Beer bar owners began clamoring for liquor licenses in 1972 as soon as the state legislature passed the 18-year-old adult law. In February, the Malt Beverage Association, through lobbyist James Bouillon of Madison, released figures showing that the new law was driving the majority of beer bar owners out of business.

Bouillon said that of the 700 beer bars in the Association, 260 had received liquor licenses, 175 had gone out of business and the remaining 265 were losing money. The 6,300-member Wisconsin Tavern League strongly opposed the bill.

The league argued that present statutes limit municipalities to one liquor license for every 500 people, although the state ratio is about one to 375. Adding more licenses, the league said, would put even stronger pressure on the individual tavern.

Chayka said that prior to the new law there were 2,174 beer-only licenses in the state. At the time, there were 11,007 liquor licenses issued throughout the state.

Local municipalities have the power, within limits, to set the license fee and the fear among opponents of the recent legislation including the Wisconsin Tavern League is that non-beer bar owners will be slipped in under the new law.

The new law was designed to give municipalities the power to grant these licenses above their normal quotas but the legislature had hoped to make it a little difficult for the beer bar owners.

For example, the law states that a three-fourths vote of the municipality board or council is required for issuance of the license. In addition, beer bar owners must prove that 80 per cent of their 1971 receipts were for the sale of beer.

Nevertheless, most beer bar owners stated at the time the bill was passed that they felt certain to be able to obtain a license from the local municipality.

Agency head election asked

Post-Crescent Staff Writer
MADISON — Election of three of the most powerful of state department secretaries at four-year intervals on a non-partisan spring ballot has been proposed to the legislature by Sen. Dale McKenna, Jefferson Democrat.

His plan would embrace the administrative chiefs of the State Department of Natural Resources, the State Department of Agriculture and the Department of Health and Social Services.

McKenna said that he offered the proposal as an alternative to Gov. Lucey's demand that such heads of major agencies be made accountable to the popularly elected governor, as a more democratic and responsible arrangement. They are now chosen by boards that are in turn chosen by governors on a staggered basis.

McKenna apparently concedes that the governor's bill has little chance of enactment.

He suggested also that a defeat of his election proposal will show the inconsistency of Republicans who oppose the governor's plan, but often denounce what they call the lack of responsibility of state administrative agencies in the formulation of rules that have the effect of law.

Under the McKenna plan Donald Wilkinson, chief of the State Department of Agriculture, would be the first of the top officers to face the electorate, in the spring of 1975.

Secretaries Lester P. Voigt of DNR and Wilbur Schmidt of HSS would follow, in the spring of 1976.

Each of the high ranking officers have recently become subject to the will of policy boards that contain a majority of Gov. Lucey's appointees and which could dismiss them if they chose to do so. No such action is regarded as likely, however, except as frictions of which there is now no sign may develop at a future time.

Police & fire beat

Leola Binder, 425 N. Linwood Ave., told police that someone splattered green paint on his 1973 Cadillac while the vehicle was parked outside his residence Sunday afternoon. No damage estimate was given.

Thomas H. Verkullen, 1283 S. Jefferson St., reported the theft of items valued at more than $35 after his van truck was broken into outside his home Saturday night.

Police said entry was gained through a vent window, and the missing items included a compass, screwdriver, pliers, ammunition box and several cartons of shells.

William A. Ashman, 114 1/2 S. Appleton St., told police that he was assaulted by three young men as he walked in the 100 block of the southwest alley behind College Avenue about 12:30 a.m. today.

Ashman said he was struck in the chest but was able to fight off the three youths before being injured. He added that the incident happened so fast that he could get only a vague description of the three.

Two were described as six feet tall, husky and wearing blue jean jackets and stocking caps. The third was shorter and wore an Air Force-type parka with the hood up. A check of the area by police failed to turn up any of the suspects.

Appleton firemen were called to the Keith Peterson residence, 688 E. Circle St., about 2 p.m. Sunday after Kelly Peterson, 4, was reported choking on a swallowed stone. The child coughed up the stone before they arrived.

Appleton firemen were summoned to the Dan Marheine residence, 1224 W. Elsie St., after an oil burner backfired blowing a smoke pipe off about 12:30 p.m. Sunday. The house was filled with smoke, necessitating the use of a smoke ejector.

CENTER VALLEY — Two drivers were injured in a two-car accident on Outagamie County Trunk A near Center Valley Road about 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Raymond O. Timm, 65, route 2, Black Creek, complained of neck pains, while Gerald E. Bussien, 48, route 1, Black Creek, sustained a head cut.

Police said Bussien was driving north on A and struck the rear of the Timm vehicle, which was stopped for a left turn into his driveway.

LITTLE CHUTE — Grace Wagner, 22, 522 Susan St., Combined Locks, was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital after she received back injuries in a single-car accident on Van Den Brook Road, one-half mile north of Outagamie County

Tuesday, Nov. 6, 1973 The Post-Crescent, Appleton-Menasha-Menasha, Wis. A-7

Trunk JJ about 8:20 p.m. Sunday. She was riding in a car driven by Kenneth P. Wagner, 22, same address, which was headed north on Van Den Brook. Police said he failed to see a dead end warning sign ahead, left the pavement and rolled over in a plowed field.
